Health board unveils plans for hospital expansion

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

A bold step has been taken towards the construction of new healthcare facilities in Haliburton County.

On Friday, the Haliburton Highlands Health Services board approved a master plan which would see the construction of an entirely new Hyland Crest and the addition of 30 long-term care beds in Haliburton.

This plan is now being sent to the Ministry of Health, bringing the hopes of starting construction next July a little closer.

Although the board is excited about this plan, there are, of course, a few hitches.

The main problem is the Ministry has approved capital costs of $10.6-million and the new plan is expected to cost $13.7-million. However, Jim Baker, a representative from the Ministry's long-term care division in Toronto, said "the costs for the Minden site are defensible."

As to where the extra $3-million would come from, "I'm not convinced it would need more (public) money... What other partners may want to participate? I'm not talking about more money (from the province), just re-examining what money we have.... I'm not saying the well is deeper but there can be some opportunities to look in the well."

"Maybe one of the ways you look in the well is how partnerships between public and private interests can be configured," said executive director Foster Loucks later in the morning. In preliminary discussions with Extendicare about its costs for providing some of the services, Extendicare believes it can come in below existing operating costs.

As well, although it wasn't overtly mentioned at the meeting, Extendicare may be willing to work in partnership with the building of the new facility, infusing extra cash into the project.

Baker's support of the plan, and his hesitation over a proposal to try to adapt the present Hyland Crest building at less cost, seemed to help sway the board. Baker's advice was to concentrate on on-going operating costs more than the one-time capital costs. The plan to use part of the existing building and add on to it may be less expensive to construct, but it will cost more to operate than an entirely new facility, which will also accommodate the emergency department. Over the 40-year lifespan of the facility, it will be a better return on investment to

Chamber of Commerce coping with financial pressures

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce's financial picture is not as dire as once feared, says the Chamber's manager.

In the minutes for the September 18 board of directors meeting, Brian Dean says the Chamber is "in essence, bankrupt."

"We are in a very severe financial crisis, to say the least," Dean said in his manager's report. "With so many payables being carried forward from the last fiscal year, the county fee for service [of $50,000] was almost eaten up before the new fiscal year..."

"We have applied for a $15,000 loan from the Haliburton County Development Corporation to carry us through until the memberships start coming in. Bryan Brown is presently doing a cash flow statement for us. This has to be in the hands of the HCDC before the first of the month. If we do not get this loan, the doors are closed."

However, when The Echo contacted Dean after the Thanksgiving weekend, he said "no we aren't bankrupt and we're a long way from being bankrupt... Various steps have been taken since that report to counteract those signs."

He says at the Sept. 18 meeting, the board was looking at long-range plans as a way of avoiding any crisis.

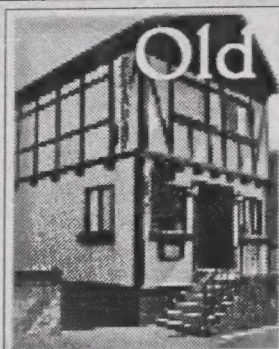

In the minutes, Dean blames the problems on, in part, a recent Echo editorial which was critical of a fundraising raffle for a cottage. Although the proceeds were to have been donated to the hospital fund, the Chamber had hoped to raise $25,000 for itself by charging the raffle management fees.

"We ran into severe problems raising the [required] $130,000 letter of credit following the publication of the unfavourable editorial in the Echo," Dean writes. "It was hands off with everybody."

To help the Chamber raise money for itself, county council

The GST police come a calling

KEITH STATA of Kinmount sent us a column about the "Revenue Canada Gestapo" by Rose Anne Kulmala in The Promoter. The column talks about a recent visit of 20 Revenue Canada officials to Bobcaygeon. Their goal was "to ask businesses if they had been cheating on their GST or paying people under the counter or if we knew anyone who may be earning a few shekles that they weren't reporting to the government. If we had been cheating but 'fessed up' now, we would not be prosecuted and if we turned in our friends and neighbours they would be eternally grateful." Stata's comment on the blitz is "all this from the government that was going to scrap the GST..."

In June, Moira Arnot of Keewaydin Cottage on Soyers Lake was surprised to be dealt a 29 hand when playing cribbage with her neighbour. Recently, while playing the first deal of cribbage with her husband Gordon, with pegging, her hand and the crib, she scored 40 points, which is one third of the total points for a game! Is that some kind of record, too?!

Trent Severn Waterway issues last report of the season

The Haliburton lakes were down to 50.6% on October 7, 1996. This level is about 6% above the 21-year average for that date. The lakes in 1995 were very near normal at this date, but rose a lot, later rising above 65% in mid-November.

The flows everywhere continue much above normal for the time of year. The Otonabee, for instance, is holding at the safe boating limit. This flow is nearly three times the normal for late September early October, due to the recent rainfalls. Some of the Kawarthas peaked at 106% and now are back to 100% compared to a normal of 92%.

Lost man walks out of bush after cold night

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

A Thornhill man lost while scouting a hunting area north of Fort Irwin walked to safety Friday morning after spending a cold night alone in the bush.

Martin Vantol, 63, walked about 13 kilometres from the East Lake area where he went missing to a cottage on Kingscote Lake, near Benoit Lake, where he was able to notify friends and police of his whereabouts.

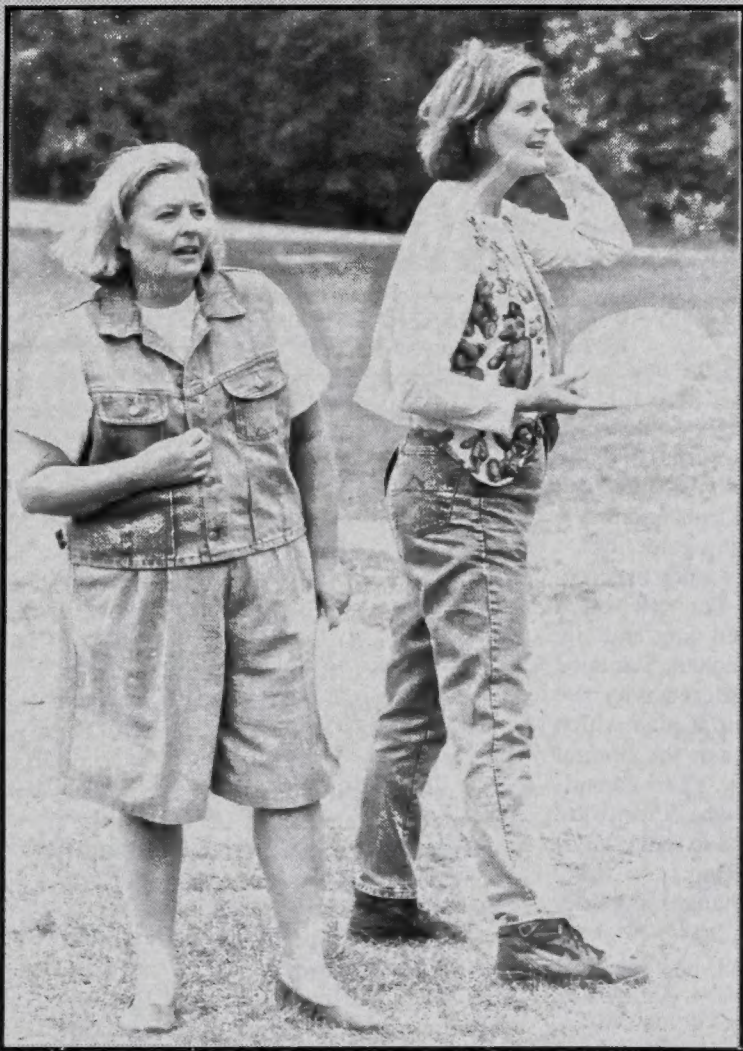

A search party including the OPP emergency rescue team, a police helicopter, canine units, the Haliburton Search and Rescue team, as well as Vantol's friends and family had been looking for the lost man.

Vantol became separated from two friends Thursday at about 2:30 p.m. when walking in very dense bush in preparation for the hunting season. He was reported missing at about 8:30 p.m.

The search was called off Friday morning at about 9:15 when Vantol found his way to the cottage.

Despite his long, cold night in the woods — the temperature dropped to -3 Celsius Thursday night — police report Vantol came through his ordeal in good physical condition.

Firefighters train for ice and water rescue

... but Stanhope council won't give them the go-ahead to use it yet

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

Stanhope council is leading its firefighters to water, but won't let them jump in — yet.

In a move that one councillor likened to giving a fisherman a rod while holding back the bait, council granted its fire chief and another firefighter approval to take an ice and water rescue training course so that they may train the rest of the department in the rescue technique.

However, councillors stopped short of giving the fire department the go ahead to actually perform the controversial ice and water rescues.

The decision seemed to confuse even some members of council, as well as the fire chief, who assumed that authority to use the training would go hand-in-hand with receiving it.

"One is essentially part of the other," said Reeve Jock Mavor.

"Do we have to wait for them to come back and say, 'Now that you've got the training you can use it?'"

The answer to that question, according to the resolution passed on Wednesday, is, "Yes."

Fire chief Bob Pollard and firefighter Dan Stiver, both licensed scuba divers, were given approval to attend a free training course this January in levels two and three of ice and water rescue.

If they pass the course, they will be able to train the remainder of the firefighters who are already qualified to perform shore-based level one ice and water rescues.

Levels two and three require firefighters to go out on the ice, or enter the water, to save people — something firefighters across the county are presently forbidden to do.

Local municipalities became worried about liability after a case a few years ago where the municipality of Port Colbourne was sued by the family of a firefighter who drowned while trying to save someone else's life.

And until Stanhope council decides otherwise — regardless of the training it has approved — Stanhope's firefighters are to continue to stay on land.

"It's like giving a fisherman the fishing pole and not giving him the bait," complained councillor Ann Barker.

She argued the municipality should allow its firefighters to perform ice and water rescues as soon as they've received the proper training.

"Seeing as we've had several drowning in this area in the past few years, I don't know how much longer we'd want to wait," she said.

But deputy-reeve Eleanor Harrison maintained the municipality is not in the financial position to pay for the equipment necessary.

"I'm not sure we have to be first all the time," she said. "... I'm just not sure we can afford this right now."

However, Pollard said there is not a "great expense" involved with being equipped to perform the rescues.

He and Stiver will both need special suits that cost roughly $550 each to take the course in January, but the department has the funds in its budget, he said.

The municipality has applied for 45 per cent funding under a special grant program toward the purchase of necessary equipment, totalling $8,600.

"Knowing this fire department as I do, I know that by human nature they are going to endeavor to enter the ice and if I haven't tried to provide them with the kind of training they require, that's a hell of a burden for me to carry around," said Mavor.

start with a new building. "It's critical that the building be designed for senior citizens 30 years from now."

(Ted Brandon, who was at the meeting representing MPP Chris Hodgson's office, also pointed out that if the existing building is modified, access to the emergency department is through 'Mackayville' a residential area that also includes the school. With a new building, access would be off the less-populated Deep Bay Road.)

Likewise, if the board tries to cut too many corners on renovations to the acute care wing of the Haliburton Hospital, the consultants preparing the master plan warned of the "while we're at it" syndrome. That is, while the board may believe it can get by with minimal changes to the existing building, once construction starts there'll be temptations to make changes.

There was some discussion about the original cost estimate of $10.6-million for the three projects. The Ministry arrived at the figure by pulling together several aspects of a report drawn up in 1993 by consultant David Coulson (a Highlands cottager who is now a member of the board.) However, that report was drawn up just before the Ministry changed many of its construction guidelines - guidelines which make the cost of construction higher. At the time, it was believed Hyland Crest could be relatively easily renovated to allow residents more space and washroom facilities attached to each room. With the new rules, such as wider hallways, this is virtually impossible at the 30-year-old building.

"I'm not concerned with the new numbers and I can't defend where the old numbers came from," Baker said. Since the Coulson report was submitted, he says the Ministry has a much better idea of the needs of senior residents and this is reflected in the new building guidelines.

Also attending meetings were two representatives from county council, which owns the Hyland Crest building and site where the expansion is planned. Stanhope Reeve Jock Mavor wondered why the consultants would draw up a plan which was $3-million higher than the budget approved by the Ministry. (The consultants' original estimate was $5-million higher but they were asked to make modifications by Friday's meeting.)

He was told about the changes in guidelines and that it was important to show the Ministry that the project could be done within the approved budget, as well as the negative implications of doing this.

Warden Murray Fearrey said there's still the little problem of what to do with the existing Hyland Crest. Even if it's closed, it will cost the county money.

Who will be responsible for running it in whatever new role it will assume (perhaps seniors housing)?

"If it's going to be yours, it's yours, it's not just ours when you can't do anything with it," Fearrey said.

This is one of the many issues still to be discussed.

Lab work for local hospitals may be switched to MDS

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The following are brief reports of items discussed at Friday's meeting of the Haliburton Highlands Health Services board.

The board will approach MDS Laboratories in Haliburton about providing laboratory services for the two hospitals.

"The service from St. Joseph's hasn't been satisfactory, particularly in the past while," reported executive director Foster Loucks.

At present, St. Joseph's is providing the testing service at 15% less than OHIP's billing rate. MDS has said it could do it at 10% less and would provide more services at the hospital site.

Although on paper it may cost more to use MDS, Dr. Aoife Conway said costs will be more than recouped through shorter patient stays. She says one patient recently had to spend five days in hospital waiting for test results.

Access to information

Any requests for information regarding the operations of the Haliburton and Minden hospitals will now have to go through the executive director.

"As a board member, you have no authority to get information any more than a citizen would," said Bill McAfee, representing the feelings of Barb Dawson, who recommended changing board policy to ensure that staff members are not approached for information. (Dawson was unable to attend Friday's meeting.)

Doug Campbell, who has presented statistics at board meetings which other board members did not have access to, said he agreed with the motion as long as statistics such as admissions, occupancy and emergency visits were presented at each meeting. That way, "you can see what we are paying for and what we are getting."

Loucks said this will be done when such statistics are available. The motion passed unanimously.

New members

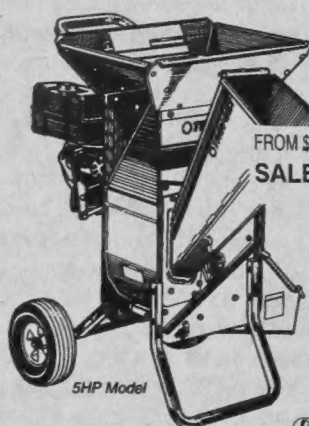

Dr. Conway was welcomed as the new president of the medical staff, and therefore a new board member. Dr. Norm Bottom was recommended and accepted as the new medical chief of staff.

The nominating committee's unanimous recommendation to appoint John Middleton as the new board member was also unanimously accepted by the board. Middleton, who is semi-retired after a career in the computer industry, is a former cottager who now lives at Eagle Lake. (He is a member of the Haliburton Rotary Club and has recently been appointed to the Sir Sandford Fleming College board of governors.)

Ted Brandon also joined the table, but not as a voting member. He is a member of MPP Chris Hodgson's staff and the board had asked Hodgson to have representation at meetings.

Here's what the new buildings will look like

Minden ($7,470,200)

• The new building will be built below the existing Hyland Crest, with access off Deep Bay Road. (A parcel of land will have to be purchased from a neighbouring landowner.)

• It will be in a shape of an "x". Three bars of the x will be for the 62 senior residents, the fourth, which is closest to the road, will be for ambulatory (emergency) care.

• The building will also include three beds for rehabilitation, convalescent and palliative care, as well as three places for observation care for up to 24 hours. There will be adult day care as possibly other professional and community health services. All units will be integrated for operational efficiency.

• The one-storey building would be about 48,000 square feet.

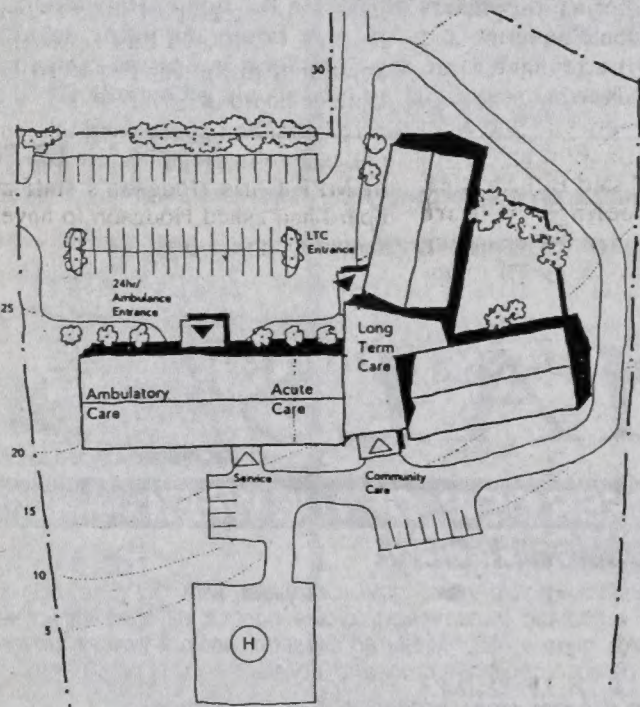

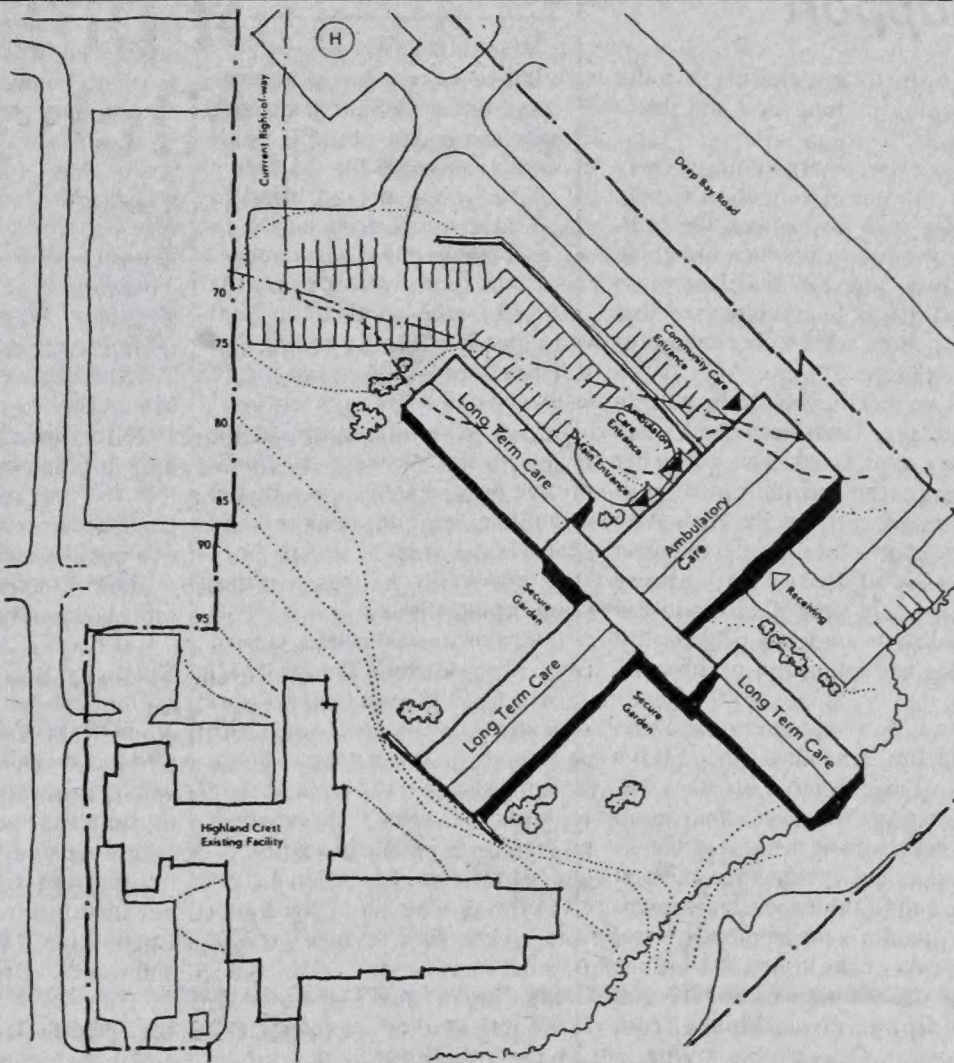

These are some of the problems associated with trying to use one wing of the existing building and adding onto it:

• Residents would have to be moved during construction.

• There is the risk that if the present building was used, the Fire Marshall's Office may not approve of the hallway width not meeting present standards.

• It would have to be staffed as two separate units, adding to operating costs.

• There may be problems in trying to link the building's infrastructure, such as heating and nurse call systems

Haliburton ($5,714,000)

• There will be the addition of 30 long-term care beds in two separate wings built towards the lake.

• With the retention of the present building for 10 acute care beds (an increase from the present seven), the building will look like a "Y".

• Moderate renovations of the old building are necessary

• The total square footage will be 35,000.

Total project

• The new furniture and equipment costs for both sites are estimated at 5% of construction or $541,000.

• The two sites will employ a total of 105 full-time equivalents, including relief. This compares to the present complement of 86. The projections are within the estimated operating costs.

Minden hospital to stay open 24 hours a day

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Minden Hospital will continue to stay open 24 hours a day for the winter months.

At Friday's meeting, the Haliburton Highlands Health Services board was pleased to find out that its financial position is strong enough to provide the level of service that the public strongly desires. Otherwise, the hospital's emergency department would have had to be closed from 8 p.m. to 8 a.m.

By the end of August, the hospitals had spent $100,000 less than budgeted and keeping the hospital open will cost $50,000.

There was little discussion about the decision as it met the aspirations of board members as expressed at previous meetings.

The board agreed to keep the hospital open 24 hours at least until the next fiscal year starts on April 1, giving the staff a much-needed sense of stability.

Meanwhile, now that all staff at Haliburton Hospital, including x-ray technicians, will soon be unionized, the board will face new financial pressures. For instance, when an x-ray technician is called in after 4 p.m., he or she will now have to be paid time and a half for a minimum of four hours. Loucks, who was not commenting on the formation of the union, said that on a recent Sunday, the technician had to be called in three times.

Chamber's fundraising plans don't generate expected levels of public support had agreed to give the Chamber clear title to the land the office sits on on Hwy 35 as long as the Chamber paid the legal fees. However, Dean writes "the land transfer became bogged down when a recent survey on the south end of our property changed the original lines. Also, the TD bank would not give us a letter of credit without collateral containing a 'right of first refusal', which was inherent in the agreement with the county."

"What really put the final peg in the shoe was the lack of support from the membership of both general meetings that were called."

Meanwhile, as of September 18, ticket sales for the Glenn Miller Tribute Band dance at the PineStone this Friday night were "very slow." The tickets cost $200 a couple and include the dinner and dance. The evening was planned as a Chamber fundraiser. The slow sales were considered a "serious situation."

Since then, the Chamber has offered a 20% discount on the tickets and this generated more interest, Dean said Tuesday. "The dance is coming along comfortably," he said. Asked if sales had yet reached the break-even point, he said "we're getting close to it" and encouraged people to get tickets for the evening of fine food and dancing.

Sales were also going slowly for the new Destination Guide. As of mid-September, the company hired to produce the guide (which lost $20,000 last year) said it was "very surprised that only three ads had been paid for at that time."

Two meetings with the guide's publisher have been held since then, said Dean. The publisher has guaranteed the guides will be ready early in the new year. Asked whether the Chamber is at risk of losing any money again this year, Dean said the publishers are responsible for all sales and collection of advertising fees.

In a previous interview, Dean told the Echo that Ethel Muli's layoff as executive assistant was a temporary measure that would be reviewed at the end of the 13 weeks. The minutes read that at the end of the 13 weeks, she will be "paid a sum of money equal to 'two weeks in lieu.'"

Once the board has received its financial statement from Dawson Gray Accountants, a date for the annual general meeting will be set, Dean says. The Chamber will also soon be asking for nominations for Highlander of the Year.

Who said what?

There were a lot of accusations, but no definitive answers as Glamorgan council dealt with an invoice for the salary of the young person hired to operate the tourist booth in Gooderham this past summer.

The first invoice is for $1,280, with another for $500 to follow. Deputy-reeve Bill Challis objected to having to pay either because council didn't give final approval for the hiring. As well, the booth was moved to the site of the Mountainview snackbar and when the student wasn't busy at the booth, he was working for Mountainview.

"There seems to be a lack of communication. Things don't add up," Challis told Peter Rakowski, one of the Mountainview partners. "When this (discussion) started in April, we weren't talking about it going to private business."

Challis said he didn't hear anything else about the booth until the first invoice arrived three weeks ago.

Rakowski had a way of challenging Challis's memory.

At the January 4 council meeting, Challis moved a successful motion to have the municipality's economic committee, which includes three members of council, assume responsibility for the booth.

When reminded of his motion on Wednesday, Challis said "no committee is given a carte blanc... There's nothing in the minutes on hiring or wages. The problem is not the way the booth was operated, it was how council was (not) informed (of decisions)."

Rakowski also reminded Challis of the March 25 council meeting, Challis moved that "the proposal submitted by Mountainview dated Feb. 25, 1996 for operation of the information booth be accepted subject to final planning details being acceptable to both parties as a one-year-pilot project."

"That got by me," Challis said Wednesday.

Rakowski also reminded Challis of a telephone conversation they had in the summer, when Rakowski said Challis phoned to ask if the signage was going to be improved for the booth's new location.

"I indicated to you that we hadn't had time to do that because the budget allocated for us didn't include signage and wages," Rakowski said.

"We didn't discuss that on the phone," said Challis, adding that he had simply asked about the hours the booth would be open.

"Do you remember me saying," Rakowski said, "that no matter what I tried to do you were opposed to it?"

"I do remember that," Challis said.

Challis came back to his point that the committee should inform council of decisions, especially those which will cost the municipality money. He said that Reeve Elva Bates, who along with Councillor Jean Heathcote was not present at the meeting and who sits on the committee, "obviously forgot to tell the rest of council."

"I think we're splitting hairs," said Councillor Chuck Viner. "These people did a tremendous job... What the hell are we arguing about? We had $2,000 in the budget (for the committee), it was approved and we haven't spent over it."

"All three parties are at fault," said Councillor Tom Vos, referring to the committee, council and Mountainview. Some committee meetings did not have a quorum and things were discussed informally. At council, "we never mentioned salaries or number of hours... Let's pay the rest of the bill. (Mountainview) did a very good job."

"At least we've learned something for next year," said Challis.

In the future, Rakowski said the booth should be operated by local businesses "and council should get out of it."

Business sign a no go

Minden council says its size is a hazard for drivers

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

Minden council has told a businessman to read the signs about his proposal for a downtown business directory — move it, shrink it or forget about it.

R & W Bakery owner Richard Milewski wants to put up a large billboard-style directory on main street indicating the locations of downtown shops.

But some members of council maintained the 12-foot by 11-foot sign would distract drivers and create unsafe traffic conditions in its proposed location, adjacent to main street's D & S Discount Store by the bridge.

Councillors made their feelings about the directory known at a previous meeting and told Milewski to re-work his proposal and meet with them again.

However, on Thursday at least a couple of councillors seemed frustrated by the lack of change in Milewski's plans.

"Bring us something we can accept. You know council's concerns. This is no different than your last proposal in any way, shape or form. Zero," said councillor Daryl Moore. "... We've sent you some messages here. You have to change council's mind with a proposal we can accept."

Moore, who said he doesn't "want to see a monstrosity on main street," pointed out the proposed directory would be larger than four standard sheets of plywood attached together.

Milewski said there is no way for council to tell of the sign would create traffic problems unless it tests it out.

"You can put it up and then if there's a problem, take it down," he said.

But Reeve Jeanne Anthon said it is council's job to prevent problems before they occur, where possible.

"This municipality practises risk management. Not let's wait and see if we get sued and then take the sign down," she said.

Aside from safety fears, Anthon said she is also concerned about who would pay for maintenance of the directory.

But if the sign were located somewhere else where it would not interfere with traffic, Anthon said she would be support it.

She suggested Milewski speak with the owners of Home Hardware, who she said are considering erecting some type of directory near their store.

Moore said Milewski needs to support his proposal by supplying council with estimated costs for the directory and individual letters from every business owner on main street that is for and against the directory.

Councillors recommended that he discuss the idea for a directory, as well as council's concerns, with Minden's BIA to see if they can come up with a more feasible proposal together.

Suspended students won't get bus service

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

Members of the Haliburton County Board of Education's management committee want to put the brakes on students who have been suspended from classes, but continue to ride into town on school buses.

Currently, there is no board policy that requires the bus company to be immediately notified that a child has been suspended from school.

In most cases, the principal is able to pass the information on to the bus driver directly.

But in others, principals inform the bus company of the suspension by letter, which may take longer to arrive than the length of the suspension, said business administrator Jim Bradley.

"By the time Northernways knows of the suspension, the kid could've gotten on the bus and played video games all day," he said "... It should be immediate notification so that when a kid is suspended, they're also suspended from the bus."

The committee is recommending that the board amend its suspension and anti-violence policies to ensure that Bradley is informed of suspensions immediately so that he in turn can pass the information on to the bus company.

Each committee has been asked to examine the policy to see whether it can be improved.

Glamorgan joins parents' protest over new bus policy

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

A lawsuit will be a likely result of the school's boards new busing policy, Glamorgan councillors say, and because they're concerned the municipality will be one of the parties sued, they are supporting local parents' petition to get driveway-to-driveway service restored.

"The kids very definitely have been put at risk," said Councillor Chuck Viner in response to a presentation by Alf and Joan Trotter at Wednesday's council meeting. "People say 'when I was a kid I walked 25 miles in a raging snowstorm' but that was a different world then..."

"Somehow you get the impression some of the issues weren't thought through..."

The Trotters live on Tamarack Lake Road. Like all families on the road, their children used to be picked up at the end of their driveway. But with the new rule that children may have to walk up to two kilometres before they are picked up, the children are now having to walk to a designated bus stop at the intersection with Highway 507. Since many parents are waiting in their car for the bus's arrival, the area is quite congested.

The bus's driver, Bob Winder, lives on Tamarack Lake Road and parks the bus at a house he rents out on the road. He had asked his bus company if kids could walk to the parked bus since it's closer and less dangerous than the spot near the highway. The board of education has since decided bus drivers can do this, but they will only be paid for mileage on the approved route.

However, there's still the legal issue of who is responsible if there's an accident between where the bus is parked and the designated start off point.

The Trotters say the new bus policy means an accident is just waiting to happen, and since the municipality is responsible for maintaining the road, it will likely be sued when that accident occurs.

"There are some very serious safety issues," Mr. Trotter warned. He also feels the new policy devalues their property because young families wouldn't want to move there.

Council agreed to make a resolution asking that bus service be resumed. This will be part of the Trotters' arsenal when they present the board of education with their petition.

"I agree on so many of the issues," said Viner. "There will be a lawsuit and the irony really is the people who will get off scot free is the board of education."

Damaged log chute needs to be replaced

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

The following are brief reports of items discussed at Stanhope council's meeting on Wednesday.

Stanhope's historic Hawk River log chute, between Hawk and Halls Lakes, has fallen into such a bad state of repair that it would be better to completely replace it than try to fix it, reported councillor Jim Hicks.

The only problem is the big price-tag for the work.

"We're going to have to find money from outside sources," Hicks told council. "... We're looking at a round figure of about $60,000 to replace it from elsewhere other than the taxpayers."

Hicks and other members of the municipality's recreation committee recently gave the log chute a thorough inspection and found extensive damage.

He said the municipality could try to get a government heritage grant to help with the replacement costs or approach lumber companies which may be interested in preserving part of their past for financial assistance.

Clerk-treasurer Gerald Bain said it may be possible to get some infrastructure funding for the project, if it's available.

Though no one on council was certain, they have been told the log chute may be one of only two in the province.

Hicks said the rough estimate of $60,000 would be for a slightly shorter log chute than the existing one.

Vandalism control

Clerk Treasurer Gerald Bain pointed out that the township of Gravenhurst has found an effective way to help combat the vandalism that seems to affect just about all municipal parks.

Gravenhurst has urged property owners' associations to adopt area waterfront parks, looking after their upkeep and maintenance.

Not only do the associations have an investment in seeing that the parks are well kept, but also it is sometimes the children of their members who are responsible for the property damage.

"They have found that the vandalism has been reduced since the parents are in charge of maintenance of the parks," said Bain.

Council directed Bain to propose the idea to local property owners' associations.

Vandals were particularly hard on Stanhope parks this past summer, causing hundreds of dollars in damage.

But in an act of possible contrition, two new picnic tables mysteriously appeared in Alvin Johnson Park — perhaps to replace others that had been destroyed by vandals, said councillor Ann Barker.

"So we don't have breeding stables, but we do have breeding tables," cracked Reeve Jock Mavor.

Fly-in

The airport's fly-in/drive-in over the first weekend of the month was a great success, drawing about 90 pilots and 15 to 20 drivers in antique cars, said airport manager Dennis Lafleur.

The event, scheduled to co-incide with the Studio Tour, also attracted between 300 and 400 hungry people to pull into the airport for lunch.

Poor fire precaution

Stanhope fire chief Bob Pollard told council he was discouraged by the number of people in the municipality who have ineffective smoke detectors or don't have them at all.

Last Monday night volunteer firefighters marked fire prevention week by going door to door through the community selling smoke detectors and inspecting one that people have installed in their homes.

Pollard said firefighters found many of the homes they visited had smoke detectors with dead batteries or didn't even have the safety devices to begin with.

"If what we saw that night is any indication of what shape this township is in, it's not good."

Alcohol policy

Councillors voted to establish a new policy that will dictate rules regarding the serving and consumption of alcohol in municipal buildings, such as the community centre.

Councillor Jim Hicks has been given the task of establishing the committee that will put together the policy, with the assistance of the Haliburton Kawartha PineRidge Health Unit.

Jennifer Barr of the health unit told council an alcohol policy will help reduce the municipality's liability at events, such as weddings and dances, where special occasion permits are granted.

No turning back

THERE ARE TIMES WHEN big events feel big. Maybe there's some fanfare, a few speeches, an official ribbon cutting or a champagne bottle smashing. You know it's big because a big thing is made of it.

On Friday afternoon, a big thing happened very, very quietly. There was no celebration, no applause, no thank you speeches. Probably no one else noticed apart from the people gathered around the council chambers in Minden. The members of the Haliburton Health Services Board, the people making such a momentous decision, might not have realized it either. But when you stand back and realize what has happened, you regret that you didn't even shake someone's hand in congratulations.

Basically, on Friday afternoon the health services board approved the master plan for the new 30-bed long-term care addition at the Haliburton Hospital and a brand new Hyland Crest facility in Minden, complete with a wing for ambulatory/emergency care. It's fabulous news, the best thing that's happened in this county for a long time. It means jobs will be created, stability will be possible and more people will find the Highlands an attractive place to retire to. Isn't that a really big thing worth celebrating?

People should be very excited about Friday's decision. By sending the master plan to the Ministry of Health, there's no turning back. Once approved, it's time to hire architects to draw plans, and once they're ready and approved, it's time to call for tenders. Construction may indeed begin by next summer.

So why the lack of fanfare?

People are tired. Back in 1988, the plans for an 18-bed chronic care unit were set to go to tender when the Liberal government put a freeze on the project. It's been a long eight years since then. Cynicism has set in. A rivalry between Minden and Haliburton has been allowed to be created. Personal differences have become public debates. After eight years of wrangling, people are tired and part of them says that the way things have been going, it may be another eight years before anything actually gets done.

Of course, there is still that small, niggling detail of paying for it all. Just a mere $13.7-million, a trifling affair. If the money had to be raised for any other project, there would be cause for concern. But hospitals are a unifying force (or at least they're supposed to be.) Everyone wants good hospital services because, in essence, we're all afraid of dying. Finding the money won't be easy, but it won't be impossible. This community may even surprise itself. Who knows, perhaps the struggle to find the money will unify our communities once again. Maybe it will help us put this whole Minden versus Haliburton thing behind us.

Bake sales and raffle draws won't cut it. They are important ways of raising money for ongoing efforts to improve equipment and services at the hospital, but when the province will only chip in half of the total cost, most people will have left this earth before they could bake enough muffins to raise $6-million.

But we're in a new age, when the Montreal Forum is replaced by Molson Centre. It's an age of partnerships between private and public interests. Whether you like it or not, the money has to come from somewhere. Although the province has agreed to a $10.6-million expansion plan, a Ministry of Health representative said on Friday the new pricetag of $13.7-million didn't seem unreasonable. He could say that because he knows his Ministry isn't chipping in any more money. Instead, he alluded to this new way of doing business.

In informal discussions, there's always been talk about the health-care giant, Extendicare, getting involved in the capital planning stage as well as day-to-day operations. Once again, people who liked The Forum to be called The Forum and who don't like hospital wings or theatres being named after the donors with the most cash, will be uneasy about this. But this county already has a tough enough job raising its $3-million share. Does anyone have any ideas on how to raise $6-million by next summer?

The money issues are important and serious. They are not to be dealt with lightly. But if we concentrate too much on the money, we'll lose sight of how much this county will lose if something isn't done soon to improve healthcare facilities. Without these projects going ahead, this county's economy will continue to suffer a slow and painful death. That's why we must remember to celebrate Friday's decision. It's one of the first positive signs we've seen in a long time, and it deserves a little fanfare.

Letters to the Editor

Space squeeze hurts HHSS

The following letter was sent to Chris Hodgson, MPP Victoria-Haliburton.

Dear Mr. Hodgson:

We are seeking your assistance and support in resolving an issue that we believe is of critical importance to the present and future students and staff of Haliburton Highlands Secondary School. We are most dismayed at the apparent lack of progress towards a capital funding commitment for an addition to HHSS.

As you know, the existing facilities were designed to accommodate a maximum of 550 students, yet enrollment has swelled to 750 students and it is projected to increase again next year. The school's cafeteria seats only 120 students, the science laboratories are small and outdated, and arts facilities are inadequate. The largest of our two gymnasiums is undersized, and the second is even smaller. Our gyms are so small that we cannot host indoor athletic events, and so Haliburton County students must play all their games in other venues, incurring substantial board-funded travel costs. Currently six portable classrooms are in use. To accommodate the number of students wishing to take many of our courses, individual class sizes are growing, and students' educational opportunities are being restricted by the physical limitations of our facilities.

We are aware that your government declared a moratorium on capital funding for new construction, but we understood it was to be for one year only to allow for a review of funding procedures for additions already proposed.

Can we be informed about what progress has been made with this review and more specifically the status of Haliburton County's requests for approval to build new facilities at HHSS.

We believe the present inadequacies of the high school's facilities are detrimentally affecting Haliburton County students, and the problems will worsen as enrollment continues to rise. They can only be resolved by proceeding with the planned addition of new gymnasiums, science labs and classrooms without further delay. It is our view that construction should begin in the spring of 1997. The students of Haliburton County need your assistance and support in this critically important matter. We trust you will give it your urgent attention.

Store's new highway access threatens drivers' safety

The following letter was sent to MPP Chris Hodgson and the Minister of Transportation.

To whom it may concern:

I am writing this letter in the hope that something will be done to rectify the situation caused by the Ministry of Transportation in front of my new business (Miller's store in Tory Hill).

I believe the MTO is creating an entry point that not only differs from the one agreed upon during expropriation, but is also unsafe.

In my opinion the grade of the highway is too great in relation to its distance from the building. For this reason the point of entry was relocated directly in front of the main door. Placing the entry there has denied us access to the parking area on the east side of the building. The grade of this entry has denied access to us by large or top heavy vehicles. Water flow from the highway will cause icing at the entry as well as in my parking lot. The water that is able to flow from the parking lot will end up behind the store, in the basement, or contaminating my well. The snow being removed from the highway will also pose a problem as the store now sits in a hole created by the MTO and their newly elevated highways.

The entry being placed at the newly decided location also puts my clients, staff and myself in jeopardy of being struck by vehiwinter home check-list to see if you're using energy wisely.

Fire up the furnace

During the winter, your furnace is your best friend. With heating accounting for about 75 percent of a home's energy consumption, it's important to make sure your furnace is working properly and efficiently. Regulating heat is also important. Use the thermostat wisely and you'll barely notice the difference, except on your heating bill.

- Have you had your furnace serviced this year? A furnace should be serviced and cleaned at least once a year by a certified heating contractor. Cleaning keeps it free of dust that can clog vents and make it work harder and use more energy. You should also change filters twice during the season.

- How efficient is your furnace? Check with your heating representative to make sure your furnace is up to today's modern efficiency standards.

- What temperature is your thermostat set at? Lowering your temperature just 5°C can save you up to seven percent on heating costs. A good rule of thumb is to set your thermostat at 21°C while you're at home during the day, and at 18°C during the night.

- Is your thermostat programmable? It's easy to install a thermostat that will automatically adjust the temperature in your home — keeping the house cooler while you're out, and warming it up just before you get home!

Help your water heater

Water heating can account for 20 to 25 percent of your home energy bill. Making sure you're using hot water efficiently will save you money all year 'round, not just during the winter.

- Is your water heater well insulated? Make sure it is! Insulation helps it heat water faster and more efficiently. For faster hot water, install a gas or oil water heater. It can give you a full tank of steaming hot water in just one hour, compared to three or four hours other water heaters can take.

- Are you wasting water? By installing an energy-efficient shower head, you can reduce the hot water you use for showers by up to one-third. You'll still get a relaxing hot shower, but you'll use less water — and save money from going down the drain.

Keep the heat in

Leaky windows and doors can have a big effect on home heating costs. Not only do they let cold air in, but they let warm air escape.

- Feel a draft? To check windows and doors for leaks, hold a candle near the area. If it flickers, there's a draft. Another sure sign is if frost starts to appear on the inside of window panes. Use caulking or weather-stripping to seal them up tight. Where possible, double glaze your windows by adding an extra layer of glass, or cover them with clear plastic sheets.

Conserving energy makes economical — and environmental sense. By taking the time now to take a close look at a few key areas around your home, you can make winter seem a little easier to bear.

R-2000 homes set new standards for quality of interior environment

Reprinted from Home BUILDER magazine, May/June '96

Canada's R-2000 Home program, introduced in 1983, has made a huge, positive impact on how homes are built in Canada and internationally. R-2000 was instrumental in creating the world's most energy-efficient houses. It established the platform for Canadian housing exports and the program has saved millions, perhaps billions, of dollars in energy over the past decade. With a new Energy Code being drafted and higher insulation and ventilation standards now in effect in most provinces, the next natural step for R-2000 is into environmental concerns, seen in the evolution of the EnviroHomes now being built from the R-2000 platform across the country.

In 1994, Natural Resources Canada updated R-2000 to place a greater emphasis on cleaner indoor air and environmental concerns, nudging the program above simply home energy savings.

In 1995, a total of 674 homes were certified and built R-2000. This compares with 1,491 homes in 1993 and 757 in 1994, the first year the new requirements came into effect.

Raw numbers do not honestly reflect the popularity of R-2000, however. Thousands of homes are now built close to R-2000 levels of energy savings and ventilation without being registered under the program.

R-2000 builders must take courses to become certified, and then be upgraded every two years.

John Broniek, technical coordinator of the R-2000 program for CHBA, says that builders in most regions have little trouble meeting the new environmental requirements and, he notes, the guidelines represent a true reflection of the future of housing demand.

According to Natural Resources Canada, R-2000's fresh emphasis on indoor air quality reflects growing consumer demand for healthy houses.

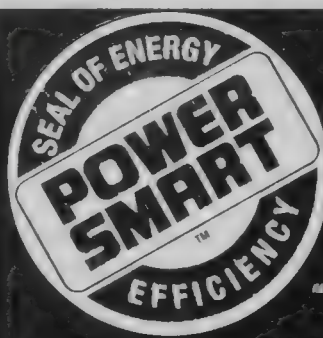

And, NRCan officials note, those builders familiar with R-2000 will be in the best position to understand and work with the proposed new National Energy Code.

What It Takes To Be R-2000

R-2000 was originally designed and built to reduce the energy use of a new home by up to 50 per cent of that for conventional new homes. Changes made to the program in 1994 added to both energy-saving and environmental potential.

R-2000 now encourages an improvement in indoor air quality through more advanced ventilation, such as heat recovery ventilation, and the use of low-toxic paints and varnishes, and low-off-gassing building materials such as wool or cotton area rugs and solid-wood cabinets and floors.

The home also must include environmental features, provided through a "pick-list" of options, such as water conserving devices - low-flush toilets, for example - and resource-efficient, low-waste building practices, such as airtight drywall and recycled materials. Insulation which uses at least 35 per cent recycled materials is also required. This can be met by cellulose (recycled paper) or either fibreglass or mineral fibre insulation with a recycled content.

There must be an increase in the level of efficiency for total energy usage in the house, including lighting. The former standards was limited to the energy used in space and water heating. Under the latest rules, R-2000 homes are required to reduce energy consumption buy a further 10 to 15 per cent.

ciencies of more than 90 percent.

Furnace efficiency refers to the percentage of available heat that is actually delivered to the living space in your house. Homeowners in search of a new furnace will come across two common measurements: seasonal and steady-state efficiency.

Seasonal efficiency rates the performance of a furnace throughout an entire heating season. It takes into account the less efficient start-up and cool-down stages of the firing cycle, as well as the periods of peak performance. Seasonal efficiencies are not yet available for most furnaces in Canada (when figures are available, they are most often used to compare new equipment).

Steady-state efficiency is calculated during the furnace's peak performance period — after the furnace is warmed up and before it cools down. It indicates the optimum performance level achieved by a furnace and is usually higher than the seasonal efficiency figure for a given appliance.

Most oil furnaces in Canada more than five years old are conventional units, typically equipped with a conventional burner and a barometric damper. A well maintained, well tuned conventional furnace will generally operate at about 73 percent steady-state efficiency and 60 percent seasonal efficiency.

New oil furnaces on the market are either based on the conventional model (but equipped with efficiency-enhancing devices) or are of an altogether different, improved design.

One of the most common pieces of equipment installed on new furnaces is the flame retention head burner. This burner improves the oil-air mixture, which results in more complete combuscomplete combustion of the oil and prevent smoke, fumes and soot buildup, resulting in a cleaner heat-exchange surface and reduced fuel costs.

Much of a conventional furnace's inefficiency is caused by heat lost up the chimney. This heat loss occurs because air escapes around the furnace's barometric damper. Many new furnaces are equipped with an additional damper (downstream from the barometric damper) that closes automatically when the furnace shuts off and opens again only when the next heating cycle begins.

In one of the newly designed high-efficiency furnaces, induced-draft fan units, combustion gases are pulled from the furnace and forced up the chimney. The chimney opening is much smaller than on a conventional furnace and the barometric damper is eliminated, so substantially less heated air is lost.

The most dramatic energy savings are possible with condensing oil furnaces. In these applications, much of the heat contained in flue gases is extracted by a secondary heat exchanger. When these gases cool sufficiently, the water in them releases additional heat that is also captured. As well, condensing furnaces do not require a conventional chimney. These design improvements result in higher seasonal and steady-state efficiencies than for any other furnace design.

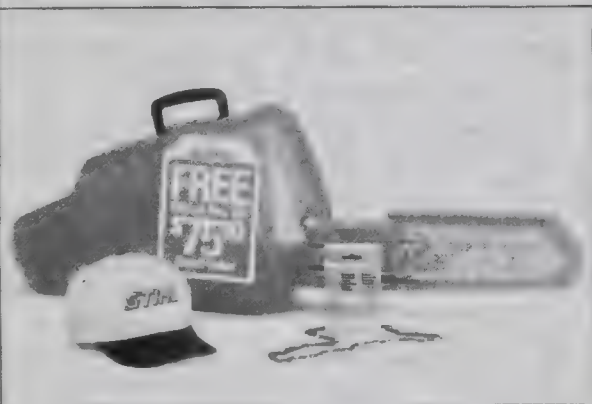

Most oil furnaces in Canada more than five years old are conventional units, typically equipped with a conventional burner and a barometric damper. A well maintained, well tuned conventional furnace will generally operate at about 73 percent steady-state efficiency and 60 percent seasonal efficiency.

tion and less soot deposit on the heat-exchange surface. Retention head burners also facilitate significant nozzle downsizing, enabling the furnace to better meet the heating requirements of the house and reduce fuel consumption.

Delayed action solenoid valves are also common devices on new oil furnaces. These valves prevent oil from flowing to the nozzle until the fuel pump reaches its correct operating pressure, and close the oil flow line immediately when the burner shuts off. These two procedures ensure

Shopping for windows? Certification label provides information you need

How can you tell if a window meets your needs? And how can you tell whether this one is better than that one. Until now there's been no effective way.

But as the Canadian Window and Door Manufacturers Association (CWDMA) moves its national Certification Program into high gear, shopping for windows and patio doors will become much easier.

"The key for consumers is the Certification label," says Helmut Schmidt, Vice-chairman of the CWDMA Certification Committee. "It's been a long time coming, but purchasers finally have a reliable way of evaluating and comparing window and patio door products."

"And not only is the label a valuable comparison tool, but it also offers a level of assurance that no one else can give you. It's a question of confidence. CWDMA Certified products have been thoroughly evaluated and are shown to meet or exceed all requirements (the CSA-A440 standard) of the Canadian Standards Association as well as live up to their individual performance claims."

"That," notes Schmidt, "is the first and most important thing you should know about the CWDMA seal of approval. You can count on it."

Then, when you take a closer look at the Certification label, you'll discover an array of useful information. The label design was agreed upon after careful consideration of how best to serve the needs of consumers.

"It was important to provide buyers with enough information for making careful comparisons and informed purchasing decisions," Schmidt said. "At the same time we didn't want to put so much on it that people wouldn't use it."

In fact, there will be two labels on CWDMA Certified products. The first, a permanent label, will bear the manufacturer's name and location, the year of manufacture and the CWDMA Certification number.

The second, a removable label, will contain the same information, as well as the vital energy rating and other relevant performance data.

The ABCs of Window Performance
CWDMA Certified products have been tested to the CSA-A440 standard in a number of key areas, including air tightness, resistance to water and resistance to wind. These mandatory tests are known as the ABCs of window performance and are clearly visible on the Certification label.

The A rating is for air tightness, the B rating is for resistance to water and the C rating is for resistance to wind.

Thus, for example, a window with a B1 rating is less suitable for an extremely wet climate than one with a B2 or B3 rating. However, it is never necessary to buy a window with a higher number if the climate in your area does not warrant it.

Because different geographical locations require different ABC ratings, you'll be able to choose the most appropriate product for your home. Local retailers will be able to help you establish the requirements of your own particular area.

The CWDMA Program also offers optional tests to window manufacturers. These include tests for resistance to condensation and resistance to forced entry. The results of optional tests also appear

On the other hand, operable windows (those that open and close) are almost always assigned a negative number, which indicates the product loses a bit more heat than it gains. The higher the ER value, the more efficient the window.

By comparing ER numbers you can assess the thermal performance of different window products and even calculate average heat savings.

The ER number is derived from the CSA Standard A440.2 (Energy Performance Evaluation of Windows and Sliding Glass Doors). The ER equation factors in solar heat gain, heat loss by transmission and heat loss by air leakage.

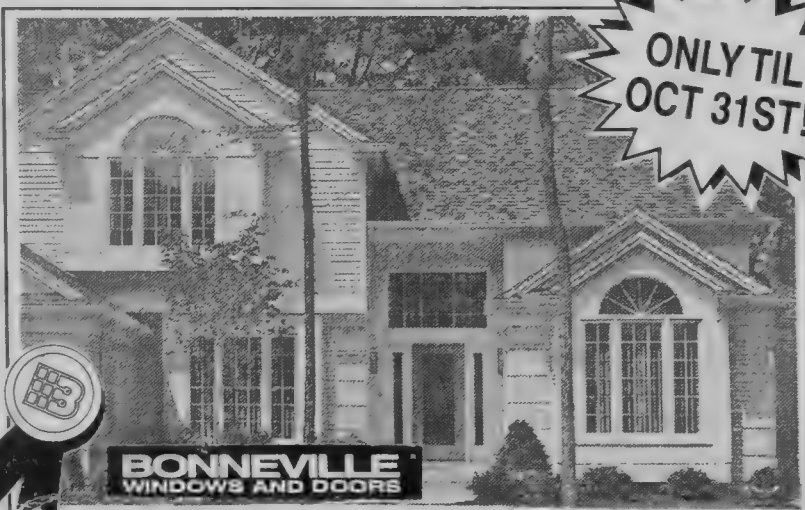

Consumer Friendly

Never before has so much useful information been so readily accessible. The 130-member CWDMA says its certification initiative is the most comprehensive in Canada. Once the program is widely in use, it will represent a significant advantage for consumers.

"Window certification is an idea whose time has come. It will not only serve consumers but also the Canadian manufacturing industry," Schmidt noted. "As homeowners learn more about performance criteria, they will begin to look for superior window products. That, in turn, will encourage manufacturers to produce the appropriate products and promote further developments in Canadian window manufacturing technology."

To find out more about the CWDMA Certification Program, contact the Canadian Window and Door Manufacturers Association, 27 Goulburn Avenue, Ottawa, Ontario K1N 8C7 or call toll free 1-800-363-3801.

Be safe, not sorry... test your smoke alarm

Most fatal fires occur at night when people are asleep. While you are sleeping you can be overcome by smoke and never wake up. Seconds can make the difference between living and dying. Make sure that you and your loved ones are protected. Install and maintain a smoke alarm.

Smoke alarms detect smoke in the early stages of fire and sound a warning that will alert you and provide the precious moments you need to escape. These inexpensive, easy to install devices can save your life.

A smoke alarm should be installed in the hallway outside of every separate sleeping area and on each level of your home.

Smoke alarms must be tested regularly. Following these maintenance tips will help to keep your alarm in good working order:

- Follow the manufacturers recommendations as smoke alarms can differ. Generally, you should test your alarms weekly by pushing the alarm test button.

- Some alarms should be tested monthly with actual smoke. For example, one manufacturer recommends that a piece of cotton string be held with pliers and carefully ignited with a safety match. Extinguish the flame and hold the smoking string six inches below, and to one side of the smoke alarm. Blow smoke towards the smoke alarm's sensing chamber until the alarm sounds.

- Replace the battery once a year or when the low battery beep signal sounds once per minute. Use only those batteries which are recommended for your particular smoke alarm.

- If you are unable to test your smoke alarm yourself, have a family member or neighbour test it for you.

Dry firewood means safe heat

Stocking the woodpile in preparation for the cold winter months has become a regular part of life for many Canadian families.

For some, this is a do-it-yourself job. However, most Canadians are not fortunate enough to own or have access to a wood lot, and the demand for dealer-supplied firewood is growing.

Firewood dealers advertise in local newspaper and on community billboards. You might want to ask a wood-burning friend or neighbour to recommend a supplier from past experience.

Early spring is the off-season for dealers, which is one good reason you should buy your firewood then. But there is a more important one. Wood cut in the winter and sold in the spring has had time to dry and season properly. Seasoned firewood burns more efficiently, giving more heat to the house per cord of wood while lessening the potential for dangerous creosote buildup in the chimney. More than half the moisture in freshly cut wood will evaporate over the summer if the wood is split and stored under cover.

If you buy your firewood in the fall, attempt to find wood that has had time to dry in a dealer's yard. Thoroughly air-dried firewood will have open cracks in the end surfaces.

Make sure you know what you're getting when you purchase firewood from a dealer. The common cord measurement for firewood is 1.2 m x 1.2m x 2.4 m (4'x4'x8'). However, other measurements are also used, including 'stove cords' and 'face cords'. A stove or face cord of 40 cm (16 inch) wood is one third of a full cord of 120 cm (48 inch) wood and thus can also be called a third cord. The actual solid content of a cord is the most important factor but this is almost impossible to measure. If there are many large air spaces in piled wood, the solid content per cord will be low. When price shopping, make sure you are comparing the same amount of wood.

You should also pay attention to the species of wood you are buying. Although the heat value per kilogram of dry wood is almost the same for all species, the heat value per cord varies greatly. Dense hardwoods, such as maple, oak and ash, are preferable for wood heating and command premium prices. Softer, less dense species, such as poplar and spruce, are much less expensive and are ideal for small, fast fires in the spring and fall, when high heat output is not needed.

You can reduce the cost of your firewood by purchasing full logs and cutting and splitting them yourself. If you can find a dealer who will supply wood in this form, the savings can be significant. However, some species, such as elm, are difficult to split. It may be worth while to join forces with friends and neighbours and rent a mechanical splitter for a day.

HEAT SAFELY WITH WOOD STOVES:

Proper installation is essential, and local fire departments can tell you how it should be done

ON A COLD fall or winter night, there's nothing better than to fire up a wood stove to provide enjoyable and efficient heat.

To maximize efficiency and safety, it is important to plan the construction of your stove carefully, have it approved by your local fire department and maintain it properly.

Ontario's Office of the Fire Marshall publishes an informative pamphlet on wood stove safety that is available at your local fire department. It outlines the wood heating system, fuel, installation, operation and maintenance.

Stoves, it says, are meant to heat only the room in which they are placed and it is important to install a stove that will produce an appropriate amount of heat for the room. Stoves that burn too hot or not hot enough may cause creosote to form on the inside of your chimney or flue pipe, creating a severe fire hazard.

The flue-pipe for a wood stove must be constructed of black iron as galvanized steel becomes too brittle when heated to the temperatures that result from burning wood.

Your chimney must conform to Ontario's Building Code Standards and should be approved by Underwriters' Laboratories of Canada (ULC) or Warnock Hersey Professional Services Ltd.

Masonry chimneys should have a well-anchored metal or tile flue pipe collar to connect it to the flue pipe.

When installing your stove, remember that it will take more floor space than its actual dimensions because of the clearances needed to ensure safety.

First of all, your stove cannot be farther than ten feet (3 m) away from the chimney. A minimum clearance of 48 inches (120 cm) is needed between your stove and combustible walls. In cases where the stove is equipped with shielding, the clearance can be 36 inches (90 cm). these clearances can be reduced by placing a heat shield on the wall, spaced out from the wall one inch (2.5 cm) by non-combustible spacers. The heat shield must not be closer than one inch (2.5 cm) to the floor and three inches (7.5 cm) from the ceiling to allow a vertical flow of air and must extend one foot (30 cm) beyond the top and edge of the stove.

All wood stoves must be mounted on a non-combustible floor pad — such as a sheet of steel — that extends 18 inches (45 cm) beyond any other side.

Always keep your draft control partially open to allow enough air to enter the stove while the fuel is flaming, reducing creosote formation.

The flue pipe should be kept as short as possible with no more than two 90-degree bends. Its length must not exceed ten feet and must not pass through a combustible wall unless an 18-inch clearance is provided between the pipe and the combustible. Flue pipes cannot be installed closer than 18 inches to a wall or ceiling unless similar protection is provided as for stoves.

No matter how well you construct your stove installation, you can't have a fire without fuel — in this case, wood.

Soft woods burn faster and hotter than hard woods and make excellent kindling. Hard woods burn more slowly and don't require replacement as often as soft woods.

Wet wood, whether wet from the elements or because it is freshly cut or young, gives off water vapours that eventually result in the formation of creosote in your chimney or flue which could catch fire and thus pose serious consequences. Wet wood is also inefficient because the heat that should be used for heating your room is used up to dry the wood.

Therefore, it is important to air-dry wood for about a year to remove most of the natural moisture in the wood. The drier your wood, the less creosote buildup will result.

When operating your stove, the Fire Marshall advises to always keep your draft control partially open to allow enough air to enter the stove while the fuel is flaming, reducing creosote formation. Before placing new wood on the fire, open the draft controls to allow more combustion air to enter, thus ensuring rapid ignition and thus, efficiency.

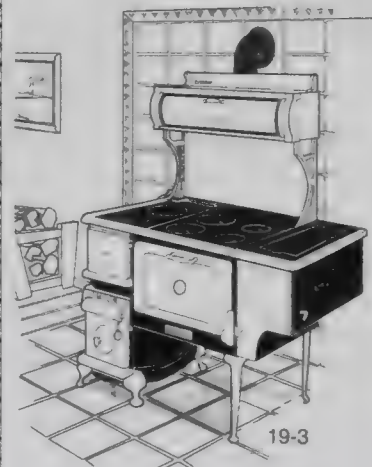

To further increase efficiency, remove ashes from your stove, frequently have your chimney cleaned, monthly if used regularly. Keeping a clean chimney will result in increased safety as well as efficiently.

This information is intended only as a guide to using wood stoves. It is essential to follow all safety standards when constructing and using your stove. A permit from the municipality is required for chimney installations and all stoves must be installed according to the regulations contained in the Ontario Building Code and Fire Code (refer to the Canadian standards Code CSA-B365, Installation Code for Solid Fuel Burning Appliances and Equipment.)

It is also important to follow the directions included with the parts of your system during installation.

To have your wood stove or coal stove inspected, contact your local fire department or municipal office.

Dual fuel furnaces an economical alternative in the Highlands

Many Canadians are discovering that heating their homes with two different fuels is an economical alternative to conventional, single-fuel heating systems.

Oil and natural gas heating systems operate at their lowest efficiency in mild weather, such as in the early spring or late fall. Fuel economy can be improved by using more efficient sources of energy during these seasons.

For example, electric heaters installed in the plenum of forced-air furnaces can effectively supplement these units.

Soon after the furnace fan has started, heat is produced by the electric elements of the plenum heater. When the outside temperature falls below a certain level, the electric heater is manually or automatically shut off and the oil system takes over.

Manual control enables homeowners to decide when to switch from one energy source to another. Automatic systems feature either an outdoor sensor or a two-stage thermostat that monitors temperatures.

In a wood-oil system, the furnace burns wood and oil in separate combustion chambers. Oil is burned only when the wood fire produces insufficient heat or goes out. This is an ideal arrangement for homeowners who want to heat with wood but also want the security of a backup system.

The outdoor sensor triggers a change of energy sources when the temperature drops to a set level. A two-stage thermostat will make the changeover when the temperature inside the house drops to where the electric plenum heater can no longer meet the heating requirements of the house. Regardless of which mechanism is used, safety controls on the plenum heater ensure that it does not operate at the same time as the oil burner.

In some regions of Canada (particularly in older homes) oil-hot water (hydronic) systems are still used. These systems, which heat the house by distributing hot water to radiators in each room, can also use electricity as a supplementary energy source.

Dydronic-electric systems operate much the same as the oil-electric plenum heater combination. A small electric boiler is connected to the existing piping network. An outside sensor (or a two-stage thermostat) can be used to determine which boiler is used (the electric and oil boilers cannot operate at the same time). When the electric boiler can no longer satisfy the heating requirements of the house, it switches to the oil boiler.

Forced-air oil heating systems (and gas systems) can also work in combination with a heat pump. A heat pump removes heat from outside air and pumps it into the house. However, heat pumps generally cannot extract sufficient heat to keep a house comfortable after outside temperatures fall below freezing. At this point, a thermostat control on the heat pump activates the backup oil, electric or gas system. Factory-built, gas-assisted heat pumps are also available. With these units, the backup gas burner is located outside the house.

Wood is also a good source of energy for dual-fuel systems, especially since it is abundant and relatively inexpensive in Haliburton County. This versatile fuel can be used in combination with oil or electricity.

In a wood-oil system, the furnace burns wood and oil in separate combustion chambers. Oil is burned only when the wood fire produces insufficient heat or goes out. This is an ideal arrangement for homeowners who want to heat with wood but also want the security of a backup system.

Add-on wood furnaces and boilers are available for use with forced-air and hydronic oil systems. Make sure any system you purchase is certified by the Canadian Standards Association and is installed by a trained technician.

Wood-electric furnaces operate under the same principle as wood-oil furnaces: the electric heating elements supply heat only when the wood fuel cannot. In this case, electric heating elements are built into the plenum.

Electric baseboard heaters can also be used to supplement wood or wood-oil furnaces, and a central electric heating system can be supplemented by an airtight wood stove.

Ensure that whatever dual-fuel system you select is properly certified and installed by a professional, particularly if an add-on or wood-burning appliance is involved. If the complex installation specifications are strictly followed, these systems will operate efficiently and safely.

HIGHWAY WORK CRITICIZED: The owners of Miller's Victory General Store in Tory Hill say changes to Hwy 648 are discouraging people from accessing their store. They say there has been extensive damage to the building and property and want the Ministry of Transportation to address the situation.

cles which will be unable to stop in time due to the newly elevated grade. Considering the fact that I dwell in this building as well as operate my business here, due consideration was not given to safety by the MTO.

This store is the only one within 13 kms. of town, and since opening this July 6, 1996, has been well received. Since the MTO began their project here we have suffered extensive damage to our building and surrounding property. Some examples are: cracking in the drywall inside, damage to the signpost outside as well as the fact that they removed the asphalt from the parking lot five weeks ago leaving a muddy hole in its place.

We are having major flooding problems, due to the water flow from the highway. There has been a marked decrease in our sales due to our clients' inability to access the store, not to mention the stress of trying to cope with the present situation while trying to start a new business.

I believe there are several solutions to these problems. Firstly, I think there should be reparation made to cover the loss of business and damages to the property. The choices available to the MTO as I see it are:

1. Lower the grade of the highway, and place the entry in the proper location.

2. Elevate the building and regrade to accommodate the new road height.

3. Move the building back to a safe distance from road.

4. Remove the original historic building and rebuild at a safe distance from the road.

5. Buy the business, building and property out completely and I will move my family and start over somewhere safe.

I truly hope these issues will be resolved before I am driven out of business or lose my sanity or both.

away from it. We rotate every week and a half to different worksites around Dauphin. That means getting used to new supervisors, new duties, new challenges and new rules every time you turn your head!

Billeting Week was a time of change as well - that meant that each of us had to pack a week's worth of stuff, move out of our comfortable little abode, away from each other, and move in with a strange new family. More rules, more challenges, more ...you guessed it, change.

Is your head spinning yet?

Perhaps now you can understand how when we arrived back home to the little house on the corner of 1st and 3rd, we hoped to be looking at a little less change. That's when, of course, we were evicted.

I can't say that change is good, nor can I say that it is bad. Our new house is actually much nicer and more spacious than the last - which is good - and for now I can call it Home Sweet Home. The thing is, in about a month we will have to pack up again and move to Kingsville, Ontario. That's a new province, a new leader, a new community, a new house, new worksites, new rules...

Through all of this change, I wondered 'When will there be some stability? When will something stay the same? I was so busy looking for it, that I didn't notice it staring me in the face all along. It was the 12 familiar faces I see every day. My group is my stability - through the good times and the bad, we have managed to stick together.

Until the next change, I'll leave you with this thought: Home isn't always the place where you hang your hat - sometimes it's just finding the stability in your ever changing life.

Jr. Redmen seek sole win to take Kawartha West

by BRUCE GRIFFITH
Coach

Win number seven for the junior Redmen football team with only one more needed to be Kawartha West Champions.

On Thursday, October 10, with high winds, snow and the debut appearance of the HHSS Spirit Club, the local boys scored a big win over the LCVI Spartans.

In the first offensive series for the Redmen, tailbacks Devon Dart and Jason Henry had huge gains with impressive blocking by the offensive line.

Minutes into the game, quarterback Mike Morissette ran the option play into the end zone for six points.

On the very next series, Devon Dart scored but the touchdown was called back on a penalty flag. This did not deter the boys as Jason Henry on the very next play power-housed his way into the end zone for six more points.

With a comfortable 14 to 0 lead, the rookie squad were put into the game for the kickoff.

But with a spectacular 85-yard run back, the Spartans closed the lead by seven.

With no scoring in the second quarter, the Redmen defence controlled the game with a blocked kick by Logan Percy, a fumble recovery by Graham Schakelaar and an interception by Chris Moynes.

In the second half, concentrating on reducing the amount of penalties against Haliburton, the Redmen defence were caught by a quick passing play by LCVI to score.

Missing the convert because of another great play by Logan Percy the score was now a close 14 to 13. This only fired up the Haliburton squad to start playing like champions and the Redmen machine cranked up their engines in the fourth quarter.

Devon Dart, with incredible moves, scored touchdown number three and Darren Gilbert dragged several Spartan players across the end zone to score touchdown number four.

Kicking specialist Ryan

O'Neill kicked all four conversions and now has the incredible record of 12 for 12.

Taking out many of the starting players, the defence continued to control the game and rookie Danny Koz had a huge tackle in the LCVI end zone to pick up a two-point safety.

Coming off the bench was Andrew Burtch as defensive end and in two plays had two quarterback sacks and some big time Animal Points (look out for this guy). Jon Swinson also carried the ball in for a touchdown but had it called back on a penalty.

Final score: Haliburton 30 - Lindsay 13. The big hits of the game were by Nathan Zoz and Allan Pugh, big catch of the game was Mike Morissette from Matt Reid and a game star to Graham Fawcett.

With one more regular league game next Friday in Fenelon Falls, the team will be concentrating on their passing game in order to prepare for the Kawartha Championship in Peterborough on October 31.

NARROW ESCAPE: Ball carrier Allan Pugh evades a tackle from a LCVI Spartan as he gains yards for the Redmen in the team's 30-13 victory last Thursday.

Bound for Kawartha Championships

GOING TO KAWARTHA TOURNEY: The junior field hockey team at HHSS clinched a spot at the Kawartha Championship last week with back-to-back wins over Lakefield College and St. Peter's. HHSS beat St. Peter's 3-2 in the first game of the double header, then shut out Lakefield 3-0.

Go figure? ... Skating!

by Nick Pawluch
and Michael Browne
Skating Parents

This is an introductory column to what we hope may become a semi-regular feature in the Echo. Ever wonder why football, baseball, hockey and other sports seem to get coverage in our local newspaper, but we see little about figure skating? Go figure?

After eight years as a parent of a figure skater (so it takes me a while to catch on!), I decided to ask why this was so. 'Lack of public interest?', I asked. 'Not at all,' I was informed. It's simply that coaches and parents involved in the other sports supply the Echo with the information and stories related to the athletes. Armed with this new insight, Nick and I decided to take the plunge and attempt the same.

With two kids involved in figure skating, Andrea, who is now in her first year at the University of Ottawa, and Tristan, who attends Grade 10 at Hal High, Nick has a wealth of knowledge and more than 15 years' experience as a skating parent. Nick has many stories to tell. My daughter Tori has skated for the last eight years, and as a neophyte parent, it still is a learning process which I hope to share with you.

There are some very exciting things happening in figure skating at the local level, at our own Haliburton Figure Skating Club. Our Fall Skating School is almost finished and registration for our regular season was completed last week. We have over 100 skaters signed up for our Canscate, Canfigureskate, Test, Competitive, Precision, and Adult Skate Programs. If you missed it, we always welcome more skaters!

As a new permanent club coach, with more than 15 years of coaching experience in the Highlands, Jane Symons joins our own David Hollows, who is a familiar face to both the Haliburton and Minden clubs. We are especially pleased to be able to provide our skaters with the expertise of senior resource coach, Guy Gordon, who has recently returned to Bobcageon, and is visiting the club weekly. Some skaters have been traveling to Lindsay and Toronto to take lessons from another talented senior coach, Maureen Owens.

We are extremely pleased to have three skaters attending the Eastern Ontario Sectional Championships, in Ottawa in early November, two of the skaters for their first time. More on this in a later column.

Over the next few weeks we hope to provide you with information on 'how skating works' (or doesn't!) and the structure of the sport (complicated at best!), from the local Canscate level to the CFSA sanctioned national competition that we see on TV each season. We hope to highlight the exciting skating opportunities available to our kids right here in the community. Profiles of both coaches and skaters are in the planning stages. We might give a little technical information about jumps and spins, so you true enthusiasts can impress your friends with your ability to distinguish a lutz from a loop, when your watching Canadians this year. Who knows we may even be brave enough to tackle those sensitive areas of pushy skating 'stage' parents, club politics and elitism in the sport.

We hope you enjoy our efforts and we would welcome your comments and ideas for future columns. Until next time then, Go figure?.....skating!

Haliburton Redmen grads tackle university football

■ Tim Stouffer and Bill Koz have made the grade playing football on a higher level

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Two former Redmen are making their presence felt on university football teams.

Bill Koz has dressed for most games of the University of Toronto Varsity Blues and has played for three games in defence.

"They say he has natural ability and he just has to develop it further," says his mother Karen, of Haliburton. She's been to most of his home games and says "I couldn't be prouder of him."

What makes Bill's achievement even more impressive is that he played on the Redmen team for only two years, not starting the game until he was in Grade 12. Most of the other players on the team, which the Toronto Star says is "in a rebuilding year" with many young players, have at least twice as much experience.

In his games played, his mother says he's sacked the quarterback, got a couple of hurries (when you make the quarterback throw the ball before he intended to) and some other tackles. He also made it to the university's specialty kickoff team.

"His future is very bright," says Tim Davies, his former coach at HHSS. "You don't often get a guy who's 6'2", weighs 200 pounds and can run really well."

"We think he will be a great linebacker for us in the future," says the Blues' head coach, Bob Laycoe.

Bill Koz

On the HHSS track and field team, Bill made it to the All-Ontario finals. He is in his first year of a four-year philosophy program.

Because they are in different divisions, it's unlikely Bill will have to play against his former Redmen teammate Tim Stouffer. Tim, who was named Male Athlete of the Year in 1996 at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School, is in his first year of a science degree at Queen's University in Kingston. He's been accepted as a defensive back for the university's Golden Gaels and although he hasn't dressed yet, his work with the Gaels shows much promise.

His biography in the Golden Gaels media guide says "Tim is a dedicated weight lifter/football player (whose) leadership and dedication will be a reminder of that other former Gael from Haliburton, All Canadian Mark Robinson."

"He was our most diversified player," says coach Davies. "We had him play a lot on our weaker side because he was very intelligent about his coverages and role on the field."

Tim is the son of Cathy and John Stouffer of Haliburton.

For Davies, who played for the Wilfrid Laurier football team, it's very gratifying to know that two of his players have also made it to the university team level. "When I played I enjoyed it so much. It's wonderful, it's a great feeling as a player and now as a coach."

Busy teen uses scant spare time to open new gym

by TASHA MOORE
HHSS Co-op Student

At the age of 16, what were you doing with your life? Going to a few parties? Spending time with your friends? Starting your own business?

Not many of us can claim to ever having started a business, but believe it or not, that is exactly what HHSS student John Craig is doing with what little spare time he has. That is, squeezing in a little business between getting great grades in school, playing on the football team, being on the cross country team, attending Sunship as a counsellor, golfing, participating in drama, and working week-ends at Radio Shack!

Not many of us can keep such a packed schedule and not lose our heads, but run a business as well?

The idea for the business, which is a gym located at the former premises of Island Paradise Fitness, came from John's friends, who wanted a place to work out. Ever since John was six years old, he has wanted to be a doctor, so working out and staying in shape is his way of practising a healthy lifestyle. But when Island Paradise closed, there was no where to go.

John already had some weight sets that he wished to move from his house, so after leasing the gym space from Ken Langdon (and buying some more weights,) he was almost set. Next some friends, such as Mike Bradley with his truck, helped him move everything to Haliburton.

All this cost him roughly $5,500, but if he gets an aerobics class started up, it will cost him almost $700 more!

Every business needs clients. He already has a group of people committed to working out, and to get more, John may place flyers around HHSS, and put an ad in The Echo.

John has had the gym open for almost two weeks. "It's going okay," he says. "It seems that people are a bit short of money right now though."

There are more adults than students presently, but John feels this will change as the sports season at school ends.

Right now his business is open from 4pm-8pm on weekdays, and 12pm-4pm on week-ends. This could change as the demand for the business changes.

Although Island Paradise didn't survive, John feels that he has a good chance of making it work since he is going to be there nearly all the time. His rent is also $550 less than the other owner's and he doesn't have to support himself yet. John is also hoping to buy more equipment and make the gym better. He really cares about keeping it going.

"I think it's great," said John's mother, Sally. "I think it's a real learning experience for him to be doing this. As a parent I only worry that he's got too much on the go!"

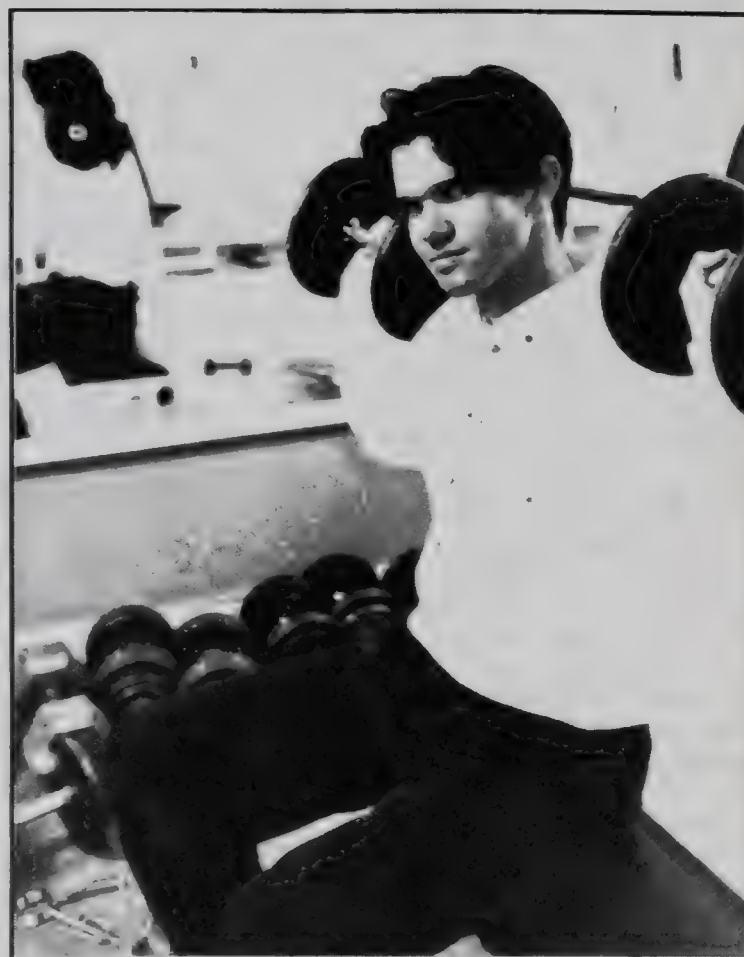

Not only are John's parents supportive of his gym, but also his brother Dan has helped him out considerably. "It's John's business," Mrs. Craig adds, "but Dan's been right there which is nice."

Some advice that John has for students who may want to open their own business is to think it through. Make sure you can spend time on it and also on other things. If you're going to miss out on sports or other activities, then don't do it.

Altogether, John's handling it pretty well! "It's mostly not letting it overwhelm you. Just take things one at a time and get them done."

One more thing. The gym doesn't have a name yet! Most are thinking, "Johns Gym"? If you have any suggestions, don't be afraid to tell John Craig if you can get a hold of him!

BUSY-NESS AS USUAL: High school student John Craig is using the little spare time he has left after school, football and other activities to run the new gym he opened this month in Haliburton.

Novice A Huskies give thanks after holiday weekend blow-out

Before the Novice A Huskies had a big turkey dinner on Sunday, they had an exhibition game on home ice against Gravenhurst.

Our boys were in a passing frenzy, winning 10 - 1.

Points were as follows: Dillon Metcalfe (pickle) came and helped us out getting two well-earned assists, thanks Dillon. Jon Sharpley had three assists, Justin Abbs, two assists, Kevin Bowman, one goal, two assists, Jesse Johnson, one goal, two assists, Josh Fick, one goal, one assist, Tim Pettit, two goals, Aaron Donaldson, two goals, one assist, and Adam Sisson earned a hat trick - your hat was still on your dad! Chris Johnston made some great saves, and Matt Tripp played a great defensive game.

The boys have a busy schedule next weekend with their first tournament, in Newcastle, on Saturday, then a game in Fenelon on Sunday. Good luck boys.

Also a special thank you to Mel Tripp for graciously offering to sew the boys' name banners on the back of their sweaters - Thanks Mel!

Activities available to heat up long, cold winter

Here are two ways to help keep in shape and have fun over the winter.

Every Monday night from 7:45 to 9:45, bring your badminton to Archie Stouffer Elementary School for recreational badminton competition. This is available for high school students and adults. A season's pass will be charged as a way of recouping the cost of renting the gym.

For more information, call Bruna Foran at 286-2301 or Lois Rigney at 286-1765.

The first games begin November 4.

Then there's "Be wise - exercise", a walking club organized by the Haliburton chapter of the Heart and Stroke Foundation.

In Minden, people are invited to walk weekday mornings from 7:30 to 8:15 at ASES in Minden. The dates are October 15 to May 31. For more information, call Morris Duff at 286-6079.

In Haliburton, the morning walks are from 7:15 to 8:15 at the high school, school days from October 15 to May 31.

For more information, call Al Gostock at 457-3362 or Jacqueline and Kelly Metcalfe at 457-3756.

Snowdon responds to critics

Council intends to go forward with plan to accept outside waste

Snowdon Council, meeting on October 7, 1996, has approved petitioning the Ministry of the Environment and Energy for a one-time amendment to the Certificate of Approval on the Irondale Landfill site for permission to accept waste material from outside the municipality. Stung by recent criticism, Council reviewed the process that had brought them to the point of making the application to MOEE, including extensive consultation with the Ministry office.

Council noted in a press release that other overtures from outside interests seeking dumping privileges at the site had been rejected outright, despite promises of large financial returns, and that no consideration was given to this proposal until proper analysis were received indicating the material to be received did not pose a health or safety risk to the community.

The Township Clerk has also indicated to Council that any long-term proposal to open access to the landfill site by outside interests would require a full scale Environmental Assessment.

Two independent firms have conducted analysis on the material to be deposited, which have been received and approved by MOEE personnel. The MOEE Durham District Office classified the material as "a solid, registerable, non-hazardous waste...suitable for disposal at any waste disposal site approved to accept solid non-hazardous waste."

Council also noted that guidelines were received from the Ministry detailing the notice provisions and process for securing the requested one-time amendment, of which all the criteria were complied with fully. No requirement exists for Council to convene a public meeting under these circumstances. Notice is extended to the abutting property owners as a courtesy, with provision for comment to Council.

This was done, albeit within a short time frame, but as noted by Council, in excess of the 10-day notice provision for a Minor Variance as provided by the Planning Act.

Council has again engaged Robinson Consultants, who developed the Site Plan and Capacity Study at the Township Landfill sites, to provide technical expertise in the handling of the material to facilitate operational and maintenance activities on the site over the long-term.

Earlier studies on the Irondale Landfill site indicated that with significant alterations and implementation studies on the site, the potential exists for a 150-year lifespan. The existing methodology for receiving and processing waste at the site projected a 30 to 40-year lifespan (this was also prior to implementation of the present recycling program).

Monies received are designated by Council to discharge the long-term loan obligations of the municipality, better positioning it in restructuring negotiations.

Snowdon Reeve George Simmons has noted that the proposal to accept the Whitby material and the site plans developed with the consultants will substantially enhance the appearance and operations at the landfill site.

Efforts to minimize the impact of truck traffic to the site were considered by Council through an extended period over which the material may be accepted at the site, with monitoring of conditions and control over road access extended to the Township Road Superintendent.

In response to criticism leveled at Council in an editorial by the Minden Times, Council reiterated that all actions taken by the municipality were considered in open session of Council and in full compliance with MOEE.

On the greater issues raised by the editorial,

Council acknowledges the need for debate and consultation over public services on a broader scale, given the significant cuts to provincial transfer payments, the impact of down-loading responsibilities, with no fiscal relief, and the decline of the area economy. These are part and parcel of the overall discussions needed to move the agenda on restructuring.

The demise of a Waste Management Plan for implementation throughout the county, which would have addressed some of the concerns suggested in the editorial; the failure to develop a County Official Plan to direct a consistent approach to land use throughout the county, including Watershed Management; and the impasse in reaching a resolve to the issue of Health Care facilities in the county, are just a few of the issues having a negative impact on the economy of Haliburton County, council said.

Simmons argues Glamorgan council ignored his concerns over Bark Lake

George Simmons reproached Glamorgan council at its meeting last week for not formally discussing his objections when it approved a rezoning for the former Bark Lake Leadership Centre.

"Whether you're for or against my concerns, there should be deliberation about them, if you're going to throw my concerns out or not," said Simmons, a former Bark Lake employee and the reeve of the neighbouring municipality. (Simmons is objecting to the rezoning as a private individual, not as a representative of Snowdon council.)

For the second time that evening, there was a debate about who said what. (See story on the tourist information booth on page 6.) Simmons, who wasn't at the public meeting for the rezoning, said he checked with the Echo reporter and she said his concerns had not been debated. (Unfortunately, it was a different reporter than the one attending Wednesday's meeting.)

His concerns are the need for public access to the lake by an easement over the property and the existence of a landfill site on the property which concerns hazardous waste and is not recognized in the new zoning.

Deputy-reeve Bill Challis said "I'm sure they were addressed at some time... All the concerns were addressed to our satisfaction."

Clerk Glen Madill said the municipality's planner addressed the landfill issue by flagging it as a landfill and putting a buffer zone around it. There is no proof it contains hazardous waste, he said.

Later in the meeting, Simmons said "from working there for 16 years, I'm aware of what's in there. If asbestos is a hazardous waste, then it should be considered a hazardous waste site."

Councillor Chuck Viner said Simmons' concerns were "part and parcel of the overall discussion. Part of the feeling was that the landfill site was not a problem. If it had have been, why didn't two government bodies not ask for some studies or information..."

"We think what's happened at Bark Lake is a neat thing," Viner said. "Why should we put roadblocks in the way?"

When Simmons said he had 20 days in which to decide whether to take his objections to the Ontario Municipal Board, Viner said "if you feel we've done something wrong, in all conscience, you should go to the OMB."

"It's hard for me to see your point," said Challis. "I don't see how (the new use as a centre for learning English as a second language, multi-media studies, a corporate retreat and youth leadership camp) will hurt anything. I think it will help businesses around here. We found nothing there to be concerned with."

Casino fundraiser a risky gamble: consultant

■ Health board decides more planning needed before rolling the dice

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

It's not prudent to rush into having a fundraising casino, says a consultant's report which provides an informative glimpse at the pratfalls and promises of hosting such large events.

At first, it had been hoped to hold the casino at PineStone on Thanksgiving weekend, but Haliburton resident Lynda Shadbolt, who was hired by the Haliburton Highlands Health Services board to investigate its feasibility, said the upfront costs were too high and two weeks were not long enough in which to organize such a large event.

Her report, which was presented to the board at Friday's meeting, says "running the casino on such short notice could potentially be very detrimental to the reputation of the board (especially if money was lost.)"

Shadbolt says the idea is a good one, but it must be done well if it is to be done at all.

Here is a synopsis of her report:

- the idea originated with Roy Windover, who had read of other casinos. He envisioned a three-day casino from noon to 4 a.m. each day. Shadbolt met with him and board member Doug Campbell, and all agreed more work was needed for planning

- in order to run a casino, a casino company must be hired. One quote for four hours of six blackjack tables, one crown and anchor and nine staff is $2000 plus taxes. The casino supplier said that in order to be successful and to make money, there needed to be other activities such as door tickets, silent auctions and draws. A minimum number of 200 people is needed and the profit would likely be $600.

- marketing costs would be high but would decline if the casino was held regularly. (The PineStone has said it would favour a casino once a month.)

- a brief poll of local gamblers shows they would support the casino as a fundraiser for health services. They say drinks would have to be cheap and the casino would have to be open long enough for them to try to recoup any gambling losses. Advertising should begin four months in advance. Seven out of 10 people said they would go twice a year, not once a month.

- non gamblers would also attend as a way of raising money for health services. They would spend $20 each and once it was gone, they'd be gone, too.

Some believed the board should not be part of a gambling activity.

- an organizer with the Friends of Sir Sandford Fleming College spent four months investigating the possibility of a fundraising casino. She learned the Friends would not make a lot of money because it's so expensive to bring a casino to the county. In her plan, money would be raised selling tickets on an elimination draw

- many volunteers are needed in order to make it a success.

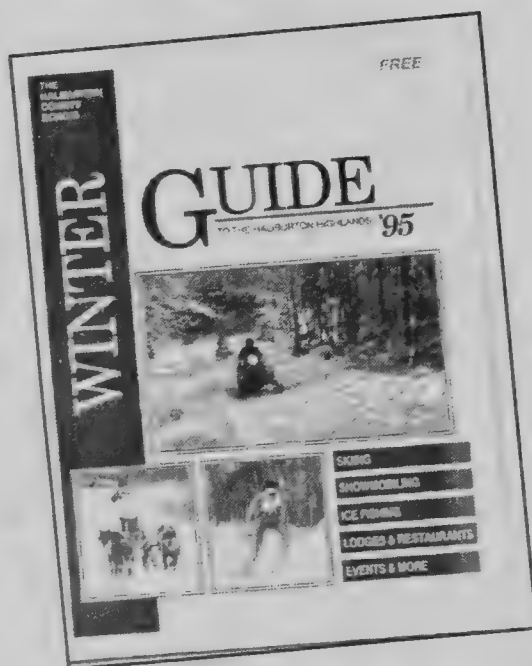

- as well, Shadbolt said many people wanted the health services foundation (its fundraising arm) to be up and running before a casino was held.

The board was appreciative of the report and agreed not to have a casino in the immediate future. However, it is a good fundraising project that the foundation, when it's established - perhaps in the next month or two - could initiate.

New counselling centre will soon open in Minden

The Haliburton County Counselling Centre and Haliburton Highlands Health Services (HHHS) are pleased to announce that as of November 1, counselling services for individuals with serious mental illness or serious dysfunction will be provided by Haliburton Highlands Health Services.

SIRCH opened the Counselling Centre in 1991 and has provided adult mental health services and counselling on a variety of issues since then. In December 1995, SIRCH decided to divest services to the mentally ill, as under Mental Health Reform, it seemed more appropriate for those services to be provided by a medical or hospital-based agency. A community consultation identified the HHHS as an appropriate sponsor, and planning for the transfer has been ongoing, in conjunction with the District Health Council and the Ministry of Health.

The program sponsored by HHHS will be known as Haliburton Highlands Mental Health Services. Arrangements are being made to locate the office at the Heritage Plaza in Minden and, as of November 1, it can be reached by telephoning (705) 286-4575. Jose Urbano will be the program coordinator on a part-time basis. Other staff include Ellen King, Dan Stevenson and Donna Sutherland.

SIRCH will continue to offer counselling to women and their families who have experienced violence, abuse or childhood sexual abuse. Val Cunningham and Cheryl McGill, the counsellors at SIRCH Counselling Services for Women may be reached by calling (705) 457-5353 or by visiting Hillside House in Haliburton Village.

Stanhope cuts road dept. hours to drive budget out of the red

by PETER DOWNS
Staff Reporter

Stanhope has cut back the hours of its roads employees in a bid to steer the department's budget out of the red.

Beginning next week, the municipality's five full-time roads staff will see their schedules scaled back to a 32-hour, four-day work week.

But while the cost-cutting measure will ease the department's budget problems, it won't pull it completely out of the hole.

"Regardless of what we do, the roads department is going to be facing a deficit for '96," said clerk-treasurer Gerald Bain.

Without the shortened work week for employees, the municipality has projected the department will go over-budget by roughly $26,000, said Reeve Mavor.

The over-expenditure is being blamed on a series of factors, but heavy snowfalls last winter meant crews were called on many times for extra duty plowing and sanding, while the summer's heavy rains led to repairs on washed out roads.

Compounding problems, the municipality had its transportation grant from the province cut by $10,000 this year.

As well, the municipality had made an attempt to trim its roads department spending by about four per cent this year.

Mavor said the department's reduced hours would not reduce the level of winter maintenance. "Safety of the roads will not be compromised."

The municipality consulted with its roads staff and decided a shortened work week for all was better than layoffs, Mavor said.

He said Stanhope is hoping to avoid a similar situation next year by talking with neighbouring municipalities about sharing services where their boundaries meet and other cost-saving initiatives.

VOLUNTEER EFFORTS HONOURED: Carol Moffatt, standing before the carved wall plaque at the Stanhope council chambers, holds the provincial award which recognizes her dedication to preserving Stanhope's history.

Carol Moffatt receives special heritage award for work on Stanhope Museum

Stanhope resident Carol Moffatt has received a provincial award honouring her efforts to establish a heritage museum within her township.

Reeve Jock Mavor presented Moffatt with an Ontario Heritage Special Achievement Award on Wednesday, on behalf of the province.

Moffatt is one of 134 people honoured under the Heritage Community Recognition Program. The new program from the Ontario Heritage Foundation recognizes local heritage conservation achievement.

Each year every municipality can nominate one person who best exemplifies heritage conservation in their local community.

Due in large part Moffatt's energy and persistence, her dream of seeing a heritage museum in Stanhope has become a reality.

Though she was honoured to receive the award, Moffatt credited all members of the municipality's heritage committee for helping establish the museum.

"It's a bit embarrassing," she said after receiving the award and a pin. "I didn't do this by myself. The only reason that building is there is because of the work of a whole group of people."

Last year, an old council chamber building from 1910 was moved to a central location next to the current municipal offices to serve as the museum.

Moffatt is now cataloguing and documenting items for the museum and is in charge of finding appropriate furniture, all on a voluntary basis.

The new museum is aimed at helping to preserve the culture, history and heritage of Stanhope township and to promote awareness of the importance of heritage conservation for generations to come.

In addition to her work with the museum, Moffatt has also been an active member of the Municipal Recreation Committee, the Municipal Firefighters' Association and the County Literacy Program.

Economic development co-ordinator will not be replaced

by JODY LINDBECK
Staff Reporter

The Haliburton County Development Corporation will not hire a replacement for the former co-ordinator of Community Economic Development, Bryan Brown.

Brown's contract expired in July and the HCDC's executive voted not to renew it.

HCDC general manager Andy Campbell says the funds which would have been used to pay the salary of the co-ordinator of community economic development will instead be used for contracting out individual projects.

Campbell says he will take on the task of monitoring all work done in this area and will report back to the Community Economic Development Committee.

All decisions on what work will be contracted out will be made by the committee.

Monmouth supports people's concerns over construction problems on Hwy 121

by Kerry Riley
Special to The Echo

The following are brief excerpts of some matters considered at the Monmouth Council meeting, held October 7.

A discussion of problems arising from the reconstruction of Hwy 121 dominated the evening. Council reviewed a letter of complaint from Gary Walsh regarding the new highway access from the Old Hadlington Road, and also considered difficulties with the entrance to the Tory Hill postal kiosk. New business owners

Sylvia Miller and Chris Gerrard from Tory Hill advised Council of problems arising as a result of the reconstruction of the entrance to their store from Hwy 121. The new entrance is narrow and steep, has created drainage problems, discouraged business, and raised serious safety issues.

Roads Superintendent Barry Dunford, and members of Council agreed that highway access from the Old Hadlington Road and the postal kiosk needs improvement.

A resolution to send a letter to the MTO requesting that these sites be widened, more clearly identified, and made more accessible, was carried.

As well, Council agreed to contact the MTO, MPP Chris Hodgson, and Transport Minister Al Palladini by letter, to express concern regarding the Miller/Gerrard situation.

Arena tenders

In other matters, five tenders for the rental of the Wilberforce, Arena snack bar were opened. The rental was awarded to Lynn Huffman for her bid of $2500.

Arena use

Council will send a letter to Brad Saunders at the Board of Education, asking whether the Wilberforce School will be continuing to use the arena and Lloyd Watson Centre for phys-ed activities. There have been rumours about that these programs will fall victim to cost-cutting measures. Currently, ice-time is provided at a reduced rate and the Lloyd Watson Centre is free of charge.

New fee

Finally, Council carried a resolution to implement a $50 severance fee, noting that these charges run as high as $150 in other townships.

Beach phone?

A discussion about the installation of a pay phone at the Wilbermere public beach (site of the Red Cross summer swim programs) ensued. Councillor Rick Forget argued in favour of the hook-up, noting that without access to a phone, help could be delayed in the event of an emergency. Reeve Keith Tallman initially felt the cost prohibitive, and worried about vandalism. The debate will continue pending further investigation of the exact cost.

Logging and tourism can work together, Wildlands League says

by JODY LINDBECK
Staff Reporter

There can be a future for forest-based communities, but all sectors have to work together, according to a spokeswoman for the Wildlands League.

Nancy Bayly, the Wildlands League's forest diversity and community survival project coordinator, was in Haliburton last week to speak about the effects of logging in Ontario.

Bayly said healthy forests are the basis for healthy communities. "I think we can work together to ensure both healthy forests and healthy communities."

During the slide presentation at the Haliburton campus of Sir Sandford Fleming College, Bayly said less than six per cent of the province is designated as protected parks. In the last decade only one major new park was established.

While the volume of wood logged has increased, the number of jobs in the logging industry has gone down, she said.

The real threat to jobs are technological change and a disappearing wood supply, which in turn are creating new pressures on forests, Bayly said.

"There is a relatively small pay off in terms of jobs for communities whose main resources are the wood surrounding them."

The effects of overcutting and mechanization are putting forest capital at risk, as are soil degradation and the "falldown effect" with new growth trees not the same quality as the trees they replaced.

"It comes down to the equivalent of overfishing the forests," Bayly said. "We have options to save forests such as ecologically sustainable logging. All kinds of scientific information is available about what level logging should be. We should draw on these ideas, as well as practical experience from years ago."

Bayly said practices such as horse logging have much less of an impact on the forests than some more modern equipment.

She suggested looking at low impact forest uses such as medicinal herbs, maple syrup, mushroom harvesting and eco-tourism. "We have barely scratched the surface of eco-tourism in Ontario compared to other provinces like British Columbia."

Bayly said eco-tourism had less of an impact on the environment than logging and created spin-offs in the community like lodgings, food and outfitting.

As a focus for change, Bayly suggested increased community control over forests and charging the real cost for logging, taking into account stress on soil and effects on wildlife.

Comments from the floor after the presentation suggested it should be localized more. Several people said they felt much of it did not relate to southern Ontario.

One man felt the problems within the forestry industry were highly complex, while solutions presented by the Wildlands League were very simplified.

Bayly said the suggestions were simplified, but they were aimed at getting people to talk.

Court hands down $5,000 in fines

High Falls Energy Corporation and Robert Reed have been fined a total of $5,000 after pleading guilty to charges laid by the Ministry of Natural Resources under the Public Lands Act.

Justice of the Peace William Jacklin was told that High Falls Energy was constructing a hydro-electric power plant adjacent to the Irondale River in Monmouth Township. In November and December of 1995, Robert Reed, the on-site manager for the corporation, directed that a coffer dam be constructed on the Crown land site with material dredged from the Irondale River.

The corporation did not have the required authorization from MNR for either of these activities.

In a statement to the court, Prosecutor Paul Gonsalves noted that it is crucial that development be undertaken within authorized limits because of the potential for environmental damage.

Major development projects on Crown lands require authorization in the form of work permits issued by MNR. The ministry monitors the work while in progress and where corporations or individuals fail to comply with the conditions of their permits, enforcement action will be undertaken.

The matter was heard in Provincial Court in Minden, October 1.

Fall spendor a brilliant scene before winter

DORSET

News

Phyllis Briscoe
766-2237

The sunshine finally brought out some of the brilliance in the leaves, making the fall scene once again something to dazzle the eyes and leave one awestruck. Being surrounded by such magnificent scenery makes one feel humble and insignificant. Thanksgiving comes at an apropos time. We do have unpleasant weather to contend with it's true, but on a sunshiny day with the fall beauty, one feels pretty fortunate.

Happy birthday to Bill Sears, Daniel Scott, and Dave McKet.

A lovely wedding was held on Saturday, September 28 at the Lake of Bays Mission Church when Dale Webb and Paula Cavanaugh were joined in Holy Matrimony. The Rev. Eric Sisel officiated.

The Matron of Honour was Karri Auben and the bridesmaids were Melanie Day and Jaime Cavanaugh. The Best Man was Joe Rathkowsky and the ushers were James Webb and Sean Haynes. The flower girl was Tabatha Webb and the ring bearer was Kevin Cavanaugh.

The bride was beautiful in a floor-length gown decorated with seed pearls, with a long train and elbow length veil. The mother of the Bride and the mother of the Groom each lit a candle that they passed to the Bride and Groom, who then lit one large candle as a symbol of their union.

The ceremony was followed by a reception at the Dorset Rec. Centre and 100 guests enjoyed a full course dinner.

The beautiful wedding cake was made by Isobel Keefer. The cake was decorated in colours to match the attendants' dresses, plum and spruce. The festivities continued with a dance at the Rec. Centre with music by Andy MacKay.

The couple is wished many years of happiness together.

The Dorset Senior Club made plans for the rest of the fall season at their last executive meeting. On Wednesday, October 30, there will be a Hallowe'en costume party, with prizes for best dressed. There will be evening meetings until and including that date. The first meeting in November on the 6th, will be a finger food lunch, pot luck, at 12 noon. During the rest of the month the meetings are at 1:30.

The Christmas dinner and gift exchange will be on Wednesday, December 6 at 6 p.m. The first meeting in the new year will be a pot luck lunch on Wednesday, January 8, 1997 at 12 noon.

H.H. If buttering the outside of a grilled cheese sandwich is a bother, spray the pan with nonstick spray or oil. It works just fine.

GENTLEMEN OF SONG: A new choir formed in Wilberforce, the Gentlemen of Song, had the residents of Extendicare humming along with them last week during its inaugural performance. The choir is looking for more members.

New Wilberforce choir wins over fans in first performance

by JODY LINDBECK
Staff Reporter

The Gentlemen of Song had toes tapping and the residents singing along when they called into Extendicare in Haliburton last week.

The choir of 10 men performed a mixture of popular tunes and time-honoured sacred songs.

Last Thursday's performance was the first time the group has performed at Extendicare and judging by the welcome they received, it won't be their last.

Dressed in matching ties and shirts, the men charmed the residents with their performance.

The Gentlemen of Song was formed in June, with Wilberforce man Phil Shcherbak the driving force behind it.

Choir director Marg Jeske says it is a love of singing which has brought the group together.

So far the membership includes Shcherbak, Charlie Weedmark, Gerald Shackleton, Bill Elliott, Ernie Hemphill, Bernie Lewis, Lloyd Griffiths, Stan Beard, Jim Donovan and Harold Bebbington.

Elsie Lewis has taken on the role of accompanist.

Anyone interested in joining the choir should contact Shcherbak to gain more information.

Legion donates books for children

A grant of $500 from the Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 129, has resulted in the installation of over 30 brand new picture books in the Dysart Branch of the Haliburton County Public Library.

In making the announcement, Joel Lewis, Director, thanked the Legion and its member on behalf of the Haliburton County Library Board and indicated that the donated books would be a "welcome addition to the library's collection of materials for younger readers."

"We all appreciate the value of reading to our society," Lewis said, adding that, "even complex skills such as computer knowledge require an ability to read. It is only when children read at an early age or even better, are read to by others, that they develop these abilities which make their future lives more rewarding and become even better citizens to the benefit of us all."

All of the books have been identified with a special sticker which identifies Branch 129 as the source.

They will be initially located in the Dysart Branch but will be available to all through the library's InterLibrary Loan system as part of the Board's commitment to resource sharing.

OK Corral is back with a bang

One of the most popular items in the auction at the Monte Carlo Night at the OK Corral last year was the preserves. Home canned, pickled, jammed or jellied, that's what folks were bidding up to amazing prices. Do you have a few spare jars to donate? People actually went back and bought more 'Play Money' to have enough to win the pickles. Just leave them with Mary at Agnew's by October 18.

All preserves aside, you should gallop on into Wilberforce for this fun evening - Saturday, October 19 at the arena. Wild West attire is encouraged. It will get you in the mood for this gamblin', singin', show girl, saloon action-packed night. Five dollars admission buys you $5000 gamblin' bucks. Since the 'bank robbery' at last year's night they've had to change the money. Gone are Murray Agnew, Mac Gadway and Clippy Stoughton! Who are those new faces on this year's bucks? See you there - and we'll find out!

If you are in the area on Saturday afternoon before the Monte Carlo Night drop up to the Legion for the Paul Adams' Cribbage Tournament.

A Harvest Lunch was enjoyed by all the students and staff at the Wilberforce School on the Friday before Thanksgiving Weekend. The main dish was turkey! Three of them were prepared by parents and teachers. Each class was responsible for a part of the meal. With plates filled from the bountiful buffet the children returned to their rooms to share their traditional Thanksgiving meal with their classmates. All were and are thankful for their terrific parent volunteers.

Teacher Barb Taylor reports that "Students of the Week" are being named again this year. In her Grade 1 class, Andi Donaldson was chosen for being complimentary to his classmates. In Diane Sheridan's Grade 1/2,

Austin Harris Saxby consistently enters class from recess quietly and settles into work quickly. Barclay Gadway was the Star of the Week in Grade 3/4 which is team-taught by Janice Benoit and Dianne Hagerman. Justin Donaldson is a good worker with good penmanship in Gary Simmons' Grade 5/6. Kindergarten, taught by Cindy Rowden, will name a Student of the Week every other Friday - when the class is in attendance.

Once again the Turkey Dinner organized by the Monmouth Fair Agricultural Fair Board was excellent. Great food, presented hot and tasty, more than satisfied the diners. Tasteful harvest decorations on tables, walls and stage, and piano music by Elsie Lewis, fed the spirit as well as the food filled the body. Thanks to all involved.

Before the dinner some awards were announced and presented. The Charles Daniel Sanderson Awards, sponsored by the Sanderson family, are offered to encourage literary abilities, and to develop skills in art and writing. Each year at the Agricultural Fair elementary school students are invited to write essays and create posters about their experiences at the fair and to submit them. This year's winners are:

For Posters: Jr. Kindergarten - first, Carolyn Barnes; second, Nygel Harris Saxby, both from Wilberforce School. Kindergarten - second, Gaven Edwards, Peterborough. Also from Wilberforce School, Grade 1 - second, Austin Harris Saxby. From Ajax, Grade 2 - Kristyanna Barber had a winning poster. In the Grade 5 category first place went to Matthew Sanderson of Toronto while Elizabeth Dowden of Grimsby won the Grade 8 first place award - both for fine essays.

Bessie Shackleton presented awards to juniors who entered exhibits at this year's fair. For most points won at the fair: first place - Elizabeth Dowden; second place - Alexandra Elliott.

The Lions' Club Award for most points at the fair went to Melanie Lewis.

Horticultural Society plans to attend district annual meeting

The Coboconk Horticulture Society met in the Anglican Church hall on Monday, September 30 with a fair attendance. President Joyce Thompson chaired the meeting. The district annual meeting, to be held at Campbellford on October 26, was discussed. The meeting starts at 9 a.m. and the cost is $15 per person. Our society can send two delegates. Two of our members will attend. District Director, Beryl Harris from Lakefield, was introduced by Joyce Thompson though she needed no introduction, having given us good advice many times in the past.

The problem we have run into is regarding putting planters on the sidewalks on the main street, and was discussed. MTO has very strict rules, and while we know we must follow the rules, it is very frustrating trying to find a way to beautify the town. Beryl gave us advice, and hopefully next year, there will be some way

Museum wants neat long johns

by MORRIS DUFF

If you have an interesting collection of long johns or one of Coca Cola bottles, the Agnes Jamieson Gallery in Minden would like to borrow and exhibit it. November 8 to 30 is the annual Local Collections Show at the Jamieson.

In past years, the Jamieson has displayed collections of china shoes, paper weights, items displaying moose and old six quarter jars.

"We like it to be relatively interesting," explained Ruth Amos, the gallery administrator. "Most people think the items should be old, but that is not a requirement..."

"I know that there are people in the community who have terrific collections that people never see. We organize this show so that the community can see these hidden treasures," Amos said.

to enjoy flowers on the main street. The riverbank rock garden was discussed, and ideas on how to use a ground cover that will stop erosion of the soil. At the last meeting, each was asked to give their idea on what to plant. Clare Ainsworth has designed a plan on planting different shrubs, etc. and had details, all mapped out, on arranging the plants for colour, their height, or short height, and it was a plan that everyone agreed was the best idea of all. Come spring, the whole idea will be put into action, and just watch that riverbank next year!

Congratulations to Kerry Downes and Joel Robinson, who were married at Faith Tabernacle on Saturday, October 5. Kerry is the daughter of Wayne and Audrey Downes and Joel is the son of Rev. Iner Robinson, and his wife Carmen, of Cardiff.

Get well wishes to Carmon Pearce and Dennis Stewart, who are patients in Ross Memorial Hospital.

Grace Graham and I attended the Avon meeting at the home of Louise Craig at Lochlin, last week.

The Lightfoots, owners of the Summer Kitchen, have enjoyed a few days at Branson, Missouri.

Several retired school teachers in the area attended the Victoria County Elementary Teachers Retirement dinner on October 9. Ada Fisher of Lindsay was a visitor of us and David Marles last week.

Cathy LaPlante has been on the sick list and was in hospital. She is now home, and I trust, is taking things easy. Get well soon, Cathy!

We have a new neighbour, John, on the corner, across the street. Don't know his last name, he is a very quiet senior. Glad to see the house occupied.

Adam and Jean Carl of Sunderland visited friends in the area last week.

While in Lindsay on Saturday, we noticed a real crowd at the vets on Angeline Street South. I'm happy to see so many really care for their pets.

We've had some truly lovely days, but I guess the fall and winter weather will soon be here. Alas, summer is history, so dig out your warm coats and boots, and the snow shovel. It's bound to be with us very soon!

The monthly men's breakfast at the Gull's Nest is October 12 and the ladies' breakfast at the Summer Kitchen will be October 21.

We had a short visit with Harvey and Blanche MacIntosh at Minden last week.

Happy birthday to Aunt Myrtle Faulkner on her 84th birthday this weekend, October 10.

now in Grade 8, were on the Honour Roll! Children from Gooderham usually attend JDHES in Grades 7 and 8, after graduating from Gooderham Elementary School at the end of Grade 6. Obviously, our little school, Gooderham Elementary School, does an excellent job!

Congratulations to Tom Bates, Sarah Billings, Tanya Hunter and Kelly Pettit. These students have really done extremely well to make the transition from a small "family" school to a very large one - and still excel in their work.

The CHACE pre-school program will be in Gooderham at the Community Centre on Monday, the 21st. This program provides a convenient opportunity for local children to learn pre-school readiness skills, that will help them adjust to Kindergarten, later on. There is no charge for this program, which runs from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m.

Gooderham Elementary School "Student of the Week" is Tara Billings, in Grade 1, for "Good Printing"!

WOODSTOVES COTTAGE LEVELLING HOT TUBS CONCRETE & STEEL CHIMNEYS

FROM MOZART TO GERSHWIN

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

THE AUDIENCE at this Sunday's duo piano performance is sure to be entertained – and not just by the music.

"They're very audience friendly," says local music teacher Lauren McInnes, who has often seen performances by Jim Anagnoson and Leslie Kinton. "They're real performers and it brings the whole performance to life."

The two internationally renowned pianists will be bringing their own pianos to the stage at Archie Stouffer Elementary School on October 20. The pianos will face one another and the audience will be able to watch the pianists' interchanges while they listen to the sounds of the two pianos perfectly blending together.

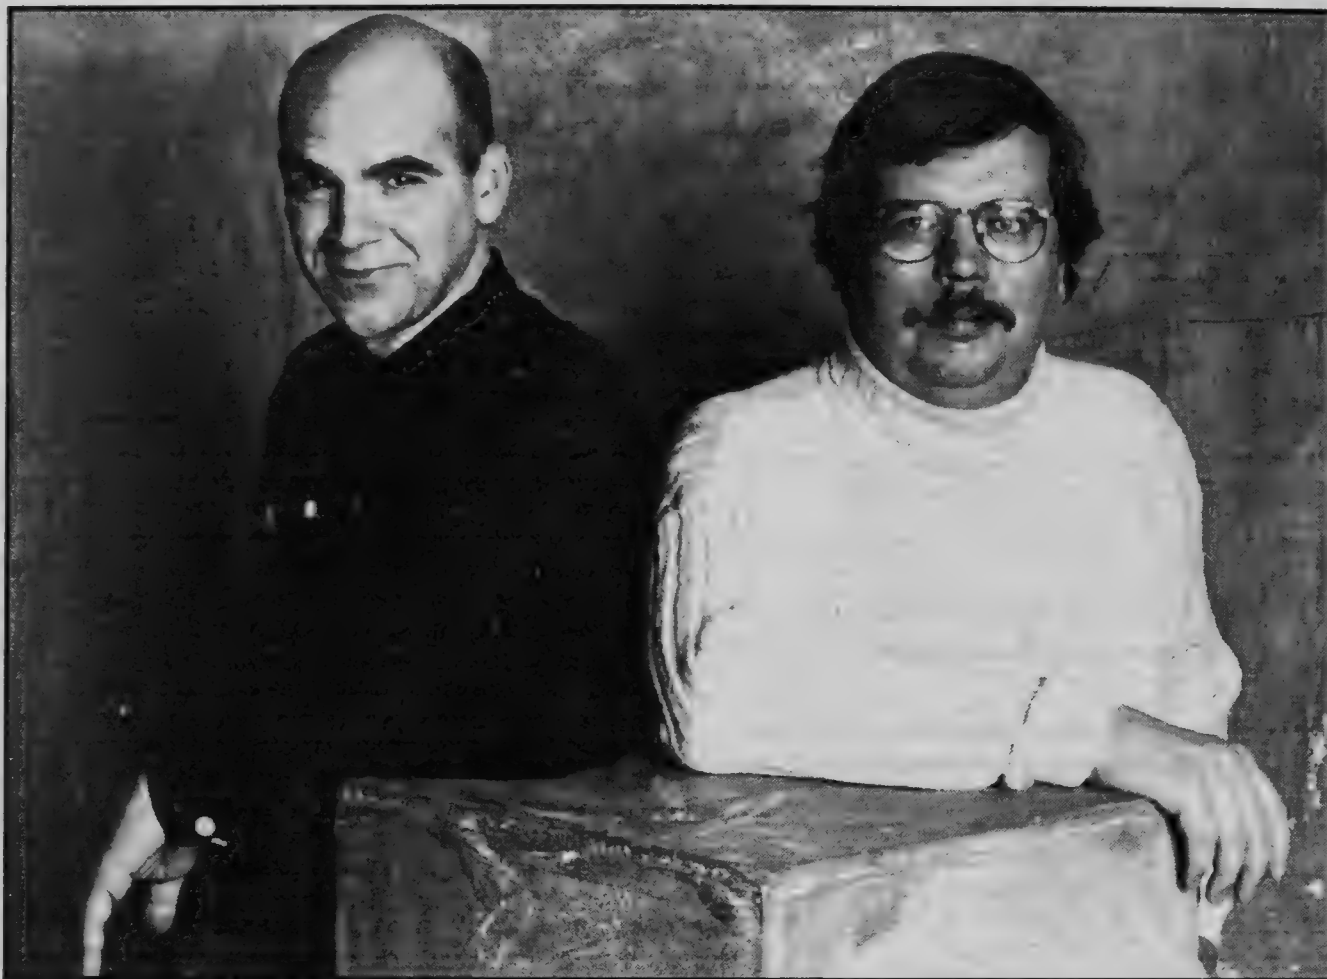

"What I've noticed is they really play off each other. It's incredible to watch the communication between them," says McInnes, who studied under Anagnoson at the Royal Conservatory of Music. "The concerts are usually amazing."

The concert, which launches the 1996-97 Haliburton County Concert Series, will feature Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue, which McInnes says they have perfected.

"A particular affinity for the music of George Gershwin resulted in their recording his two piano works to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the composer's death," says a press release, which adds, "Anagnoson and Kinton bring intelligence and wit to their public appearances. Their verbal introductions to each piece, interspersed with demonstrations at the pianos, are both informative and entertaining. Both artists are on the faculty of the Royal Conservatory of Music in Toronto...."

"From Mozart to Poulenc to Gershwin, this piano duo promises 'virtuoso brilliance, balanced ensemble, musical clarity and stylistic assurance,' says the Globe and Mail.

The concert begins at 7:30 p.m. Tickets for either the season or the concert are available at the Rails' End Gallery and Nancy's Flowers in Haliburton.

Parents – get involved!

by GORD SCHAKELAAR

The HHSS School Council's function is to bring together the community and analyze and provide input to the school on major issues. The council's input will allow HHSS to respond to its community, while assuming a major role in establishing partnerships with parents and others for the improvement of student learning.

We have developed a Mission Statement which reflects our commitment to HHSS: "The Haliburton Highlands Secondary School School Council is a collective association of parents, high school staff, students and community representatives which strives to offer advice and encouragement to the school principle and where appropriate, the school board, in matters that will promote the well-being and the effectiveness of the entire school community and thereby enhance student learning."

One of our mandates this year is to open up the lines of communication and keep all parents and/or guardians informed.

Did you know...

745 students are enrolled in HHSS this fall;

75 students (boys) play football;
36 students (girls) play field hockey;
36 students (boys) play soccer;
25 students are involved in cross-country running;

53 students showed up for "School Spirit" squad?

Approximately $22,000 was given out

Professional Development Workshop For Parents... "Understanding Post-Secondary Education". This will take place on Thursday, October 24, 7:45 to 9:00 p.m. in Room 21. Topics will include... What are the available choices, admission requirements, admission procedures, success strategies and financing higher education.

P.A. Days - October 21 and November 15.

Student Activity Council and Mr. Longo are in the middle of a "chocolate bar" campaign. This fall activity helps raise money for the students' activities for the upcoming year. Thank you to all those who have supported this event thus far and please continue to do so.

The HHSS School Council meets on the fourth Wednesday of each month at the high school. Next meeting, October 30. These meetings are open to all who have students enrolled in the school. Please feel free to attend.

WHAT'S HAPPENING AT HAL HIGH

Exchange student Jammie Ogle would love to hear from her friends in Haliburton

by TASHA MOORE
HHSS Co-op Student

* Haliburton Rotary Exchange Student Jammie Ogle from HHSS is now settled in Venezuela and has already started school there. Her mother says she is doing fine. Jammie would also love to hear from all her friends in Canada! Her address in Venezuela is:

Jammie Ogle
Av. Liberador Edif Olga
Apt 52
Urbanizaciou Las Lomas
San Cristobal - Tachira
Venezuela

* The SAC says it is planning many exciting events for us in this year. We are all going to be crowded together this Thursday for this important news.

* The chocolate selling time has come to an end once again. Everyone will be looking forward to the chocolate next year though.

* Last week both the Junior and Senior soccer teams battled IE Weldon. This was the best game of the season for the Seniors, but they were defeated 3-1. The Juniors too were defeated.

* The cross country team coached by Paul Morissette is training hard for the Kawartha Championships in Peterborough this Wednesday. Midget, Senior and Junior teams will be matching their speed, strength and agility against at least 250 other competitors. Then on the 23 of October, they will be racing off to the COSSA Championships in Port Hope.

* Last Wednesday, the Junior Field Hockey Team played and beat St. Peters 3-2 and Lakefield 3-0! Then on Thursday the Seniors played Bethany Hills and won in a score of 6-0!

* Did you see the OSAID club selling the Quick Change Cards for 75¢ at the "T" last week? Those little cards are there for a good cause! This way if you find yourself unable to drive, you can just pull out this little card and call home, or for a taxi, or friend, for free!

* Here's something you don't usually hear about! The HHSS Literary Society has been meeting every Wednesday from 3:45- 5:30 after school. So far around 12 people have been coming out to attend and share their poetry. Society members' goals are to become published authors. They have entered their work in contests in magazines such as Teen Magazine. They've also had some work published in local newspapers.

The Literary Society is also thinking of making a coffee shop somewhere in the high school! Possibly in the cafeteria! Here they would be selling non alcoholic drinks, have some light music solos from students, and share their written work.

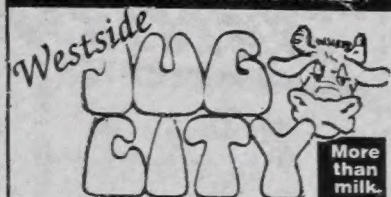

* Well, it's the last week for Sunship, so say good-bye to all that time off school, and those bright outdoor days! We are coming in for the winter now! Luckily, ELM is not too far around the corner!

AT REST

PATRICIA (McCarthy, Barker) BARNES died October 3rd, in St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough, in her 77th year. She had valiantly struggled with Sjogren's Syndrome for many years. Born in New Brunswick in 1920, she grew up in a large, close family during the tough time of the Depression in Toronto. A strong-willed, independent woman, she worked in various factory jobs prior to her marriage to Herbert Barker. After too few years, she was a 33-year-old widow with four young children. Her own strength, along with her family's support kept them together. A second marriage to Lloyd Barnes, and relocation to Wilberforce in 1958 began an adventurous new life. With three more children, but few of the accustomed urban conveniences, it was a challenge. In later years, she and "Barney" became ever-present participants at cancer support meetings in three different towns. Her warmth, and genuine concern for all will be sorely missed. Left to mourn is her devoted husband Lloyd, sons, daughters, grandchildren, nephews, nieces, sisters, brothers, and many friends. "You taught us much above love, for giving and caring were your whole life." Donations, if desired, may be made to "Sjogren's Syndrome Research", c/o Arthritis Society, 250 Bloor Street East, Toronto, Ontario M4W 3P2. CA
